TORNADO SWEEPS INDIANA TOWNS; DEAD NUMBER 50

Five Different Places Hit by High Wind Which Levelled the Ground For a Mile in New Albany—Property Damage is $2,000,000.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Albany, Ind., March 28.—The death list in the New Albany catastrophe stood at forty-six at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

"We fear that at least ten more bodies will be found in the ruins," said Mayor Morris.

Reports received today from country districts in southern Indiana say that at least five persons have been killed outside of New Albany.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 24.—More than 40 persons are dead at New Albany, Ind., and two near Carlisle, Ind., while more than 100 are injured as a result of tornadoes which struck in five different places in the state yesterday, according to the best information obtainable. Many of the injured cannot recover in the opinion of physicians at the crowded hospitals in which they are being cared for. The property loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000.

The storm wreaked its greatest destruction of life and property at New Albany, which is located on the Ohio river. In Hendricks, Sullivan, Adams and Jackson counties wide stretches of territory were laid waste by the wind.

Near Danville dwellings and other buildings were levelled for a distance of six miles in a path one mile wide. There was no loss of life.

Near Carlisle, in Sullivan county, a path three-fourths of a mile wide and 18 miles long was cleared. Wesley Hines and Mrs. William Norris were killed.

Near Seymour five persons were injured and a strip four miles long laid waste. The village of Monmouth was struck and much damage caused to property.

The only hospital in New Albany is crowded to capacity with injured and others have been sent across the river to Louisville, Ky. Indiana and Kentucky National Guards and hospital companies have been sent to the town.

The storm struck New Albany without warning. It hit West Union, a sub-division, first and it is believed several children's bodies lie under the ruins of a school building. The wind, moving southwest through the city, swept a path two blocks wide and more than a mile long. It dipped, smashing several blocks, taking its toll of life, then rose, then dipped again across the town and for six miles out into the country.

RIVER NAVIGATION SOON TO BE OPEN

Ice in Hudson Moving Out and Navigation Between Albany and New York Will Soon Start—Catskill Line Starts Monday.

As told in The Freeman on Friday the ice in the river is moving out, and from all indications it will be but a matter of days when navigation between Albany and New York will open. Navigation between this port and New York is now an accomplished fact.

From Catskill comes the announcement that the Catskill Evening Line will resume navigation between New York and Catskill on Monday evening when the freighter Storm King will leave New York at 6 o'clock and make regular trips thereafter. The date of resuming passenger service will be announced later.

This morning the steamer Ursula will leave her winter quarters at Catskill Point and run through to Rondout, where repairs will be made and her regular trips between Catskill and Albany will be resumed.

The steamer Isabella is still on dry dock with repairs completed awaiting a favorable opportunity to resume trips between Catskill and Hudson.

The ferry A. F. Beach is making regular trips between Catskill Point and Greendale.

The ferry George H. Power, running between Athens and Hudson, on Thursday broke the forward rudder in attempting to channel a way through the ice at that point. The ice is pretty well broken up at that point, but in some places is 8 to 9 inches thick.

Catskill reports that Friday the continued thaw and high wind caused the ice in the river to move out at that point.

From Albany comes the statement that the river is open from Troy to Hudson.

Home-coming Americans.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—Bringing a number of Americans from war-torn Europe, the steamer Montserrat arrived today from Cadiz, Spain, with a passenger list of 338. Among them were Dr. W. G. Dervingo, of Holyoke, Mass., who has served 18 months as a surgeon in the French army on the Verdun front; Frederick Dietzmann, American vice-consul at Barman, Germany; Raymond H. Seagle, American vice-consul at Leipzig, and 12 American business men.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS SHOWED OUR FLAG

First Torpedo Struck Healdton Under American Banner Painted on Hull—Names of Seven of U. S. Citizens Lost in Attack.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, March 24.—Captain Charles Christopher's official story of the destruction of the American oil tank steamer Healdton by a submarine with the loss of seven American lives and at least thirteen others, will be forwarded to the state department at Washington by American consular representatives.

Rotterdam despaches today quoted Captain Christopher as saying that powerful electric lights were playing upon the United States flag when the attack was made.

"The first torpedo struck us amidships just below the picture of the American banner painted on the side of the hull," said the Healdton's master. "It was followed at once by another."

London newspapers in their comment upon the destruction of this seventh American victim of "U" boats since the Kaiser's relentless submarine war began declare that it shows that ships are nowhere safe, as the Healdton was outside of the barred zone when she was sunk without warning.

The lost Americans are listed in Rotterdam advice as follows:

W. Chandler, Brooklyn; Hudgins, Norfolk, Va.; W. C. Johnson and E. Leveaux, Hoboken, N. J.; George Healey, San Francisco; R. W. Smith, Chicago and John Steiner, Pittsburgh.

SOCIALISTS WANT EX-CZAR INDICTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, via Sayville Wireless, March 24.—Indictment of Nicholas Romanoff, the former czar of Russia, is demanded by the Socialist Party, says advices to the Overseas News Agency today.

The governor-general of Irkutsk, Siberia, and the president of the municipality of Moscow, are among the latest monarchists arrested.

The Overseas Agency says:

"The Socialist party demands that the public attorney issue indictments against Nicholas Romanoff, as the former czar is now known, who, together with the ex-czarina and their sick children are now prisoners of the revolutionists, at Tsarskoe-Selo."

The Frankfurter Zeitung reports the following persons arrested:

The governor general of Irkutsk, the governor of Kursk, the president of Moscow, and a number of other monarchist leaders.

Prince Alexander of Oldenburg, a Russisan prince, was on his way from Petrograd on a special train when he was seized and taken back and put in jail.

BUYERS BACK FROM CITY.

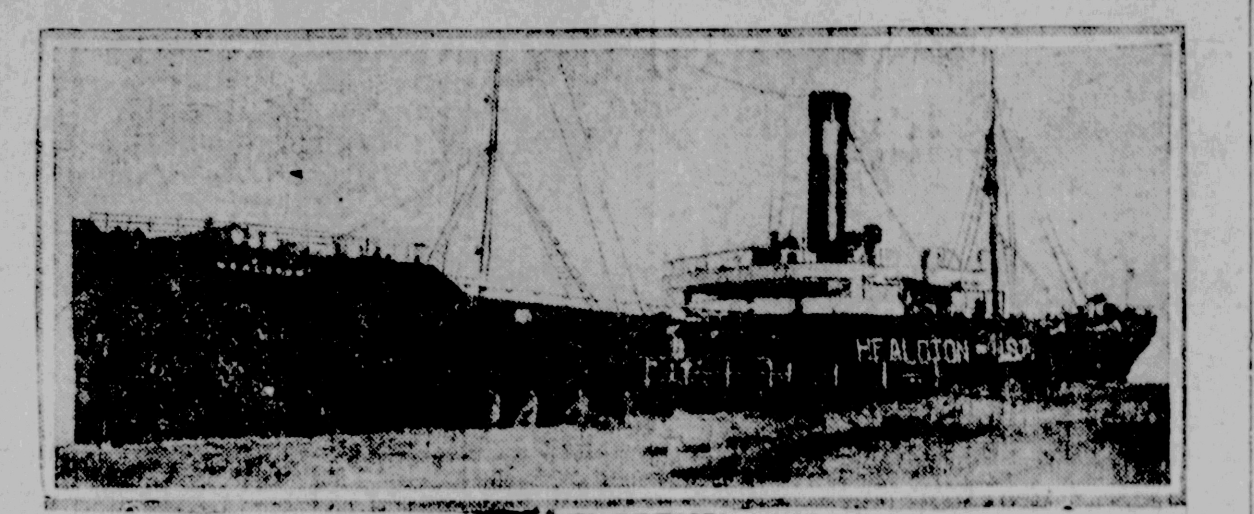
Spring in Evidence in Van Wagenen Store Activity.

Mrs. Nellie Hall Stokes of the millinery department of the L. B. Van Wagenen Company, and Mrs. Jane Van Derburg of the women's apparel department, together with one of her assistants, Miss Laura Gakenheimer, returned Friday night from a business trip of several days in New York city, where they have been making extensive purchases of millinery and apparel of the very latest models, for their large and particular patronage.

All of these women have shown themselves to be expert buyers in that they possess the art to choose articles that are stylish, serviceable, individual and refined, and withal reasonable in price. Having a quick and discerning eye, they note what is being worn by the best-dressed women of New York—that city where our American women are proverbially well dressed, and not alone are their respective departments maintained in the most efficient and satisfactory manner, but the result of their observations is plainly visible in the departments where the smaller accessories of a woman's costume, veils, gloves, collars and cuffs, fancy bags, etc., are to be found at Van Wagenen's.

Dental Robbers Busy.

Tuesday night the dental parlors of Dr. Sweezy in Middletown were broken into and a box containing a large assortment of teeth was stolen. It is believed it was the same gang who were successful in Newburgh.



S S HEALDTON.

SEVEN AMERICAN SAILORS BELIEVED U-BOAT VICTIMS.

The American Standard Oil tanker Healdton, bound from Philadelphia for Rotterdam with petroleum, which was torpedoed twenty-five miles north of Terschelling, Holland, by a German submarine without warning. The torpedoing took place in what had been designated by Germany as a "safety zone." The crew of the Healdton included thirteen Americans. A dispatch from Amsterdam states that only six of the thirteen American are among the survivors.

THEATRE WORK TO BE PUSHED ALONG

Cohen Enterprise Ready Now to Receive Bids on Main Building Which Will be Staked Out Monday.

Two of the contracts for the store which will form part of the new Cohen Theater on Wall street were awarded Friday, and bids for the main building are being solicited.

The store will occupy part of the site of the old Wolven store, the remainder of the site being occupied as the theater entrance. The contracts awarded for the store were for electric wiring, which was awarded to the Carl Miller Company, and for the plumbing and heating, which was awarded to Brown & Dressel. The plumbing contract provides for connections with the plumbing of the theater.

The theater building will be staked out on Monday by Architect Girard F. Betz and City Engineer Cedwise. Bids for parts of the construction are expected to be in the hands of the theater corporation during the coming week, some of the estimates being due by Tuesday or Wednesday. These will probably be the estimates for the steel construction, for which the specifications were issued sometimes ago and were the first of the specifications sent out to builders.

Everybody Sick of It.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—All previous records for jury deadlocks in federal court here were broken today when the jury in the case of Rae Tanzer completed sixty-five hours of deliberation without a decision. Rae Tanzer, the diminutive milliner charged with perjury in her breach of promise suit against former District Attorney James W. Osborne, is in a state of collapse today. Judge Van Fleet has been forced to retire to his hotel by illness, and several members of the jury are reported on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

RED CROSS GAINS 315 MEMBERSHIPS

Executive Committee of Ulster County Chapter Meets in New Headquarters And Outlines Program of Continuous Activities.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross was held at the new headquarters in the Preston building on Fair street on Friday afternoon, Mrs. C. N. Reed chairman, presiding. Following the reading and approval of the minutes of the last meeting, as given by the secretary, Mrs. W. N. Fessenden, several letters were read. Some of the communications were from Washington relative to the work, one being a request that the chapter notify the Washington headquarters as to the supplies already on hand. A letter from the daughters of Isabella signified the willingness of the members of this society to cooperate with the Red Cross in any way possible. Another letter from New Paltz, asked that some one from the chapter be sent to form an auxiliary in that village. Such work is being left in the hands of the officers and membership committee, Mrs. C. Gordon Reel, chairman. The secretary stated that application had been made by Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., to take up the work of making comfort bags since the work of making hospital garments was already under way by an efficient committee. It was voted to grant this request.

Fine New Headquarters.

Mrs. Reed then called attention to the fact that the new headquarters, already quite well equipped had been donated to the Red Cross by Mrs Preston, a favor that was indeed appreciated, and on motion of Mr. Schaeffer, the secretary was empowered to write a letter of thanks and appreciation to Mrs. Preston. The rug and table with office accessories were donated by Mrs. Reel, the chairs are loaned by the Federation of Women's Clubs, the posters, etc., came from headquarters at Washington or New York. It was stated that through the instrumentality of a prominent and public-spirited citizen a telephone would at once be installed, thus putting the office in shape for transacting business in a prover manner.

The motion was made and carried that Mrs. Conrad E. Hasbrouck be appointed to the regular executive committee to fill the vacancy caused by the departure from town of Dr. Mary Gage-Day. It was further voted that the chairman of all working committees of the chapter be made members of the executive committee, in order to facilitate the work of the organization.

Membership Growing.

Mrs. Fessenden reported on the membership, which included a brief report of the formation of the auxiliaries in Saugerties and Marlborough and the organization of another tomorrow in Milton, and also of the effective work of the local membership committee under the energetic and capable chairmanship of Mrs. Reel. The membership of the chapter last year was 97. Now the total membership is 412, of which there are 182 members in Kingston; 160 in Saugerties; 34 in Marlborough and 36 in Milton. In addition to the membership it was stated that there are completed 11 pair of hospital pajamas, 10 hospital night shirts, made of outing flannel; 75 comfort bags; several packages of surgical dressings; a number of hospital garments, all the latter having been made in Saugerties. Miss Ougheltree, chairman of the hospital garments committee, stated that the committee would be ready to go on at once with the work, if another set of patterns could be provided, as it was a loss of time to wait for the patterns sent from Washington to be loaned around. Patterns will be secured.

Vote Expenses For Work.

The matter of travelling expenses for the chapter officers who go to the various villages in the county to form auxiliaries, came up and it was voted that such expenses be met by the chapter. Mr. Schaeffer, treasurer, reported $223 now on hand with which to purchase supplies and carry forward the work of the chapter. It was moved and carried that the chair be authorized to appoint a regular auditing committee of three members. Later the committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. C. E. Hasbrouck, Everett Fowler and J. E. Mahar.

The question of operating the office was then presented, particular reference being made to the desirability of keeping the same open throughout the day. In order to do this it would be necessary to have some one efficient, and interested in attendance. After considerable careful discussion it was voted to keep the headquarters office open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, and the chair was authorized to secure the services of the proper person, at a salary not in excess of a specified amount.

Work on Dressings.

So far no work has been undertaken by the local chapter, in the making of surgical dressing. Both Drs. O'Meara and Norwood, joint chairmen of the surgical dressings committee were present, and spoke on this subject. It was decided that a call should be issued to the women of Kingston, whether enrolled members of the Red Cross or not, to at once begin work on the making of these surgical dressings. A sample case will be secured from Washington, and necessary supplies will be secured to begin work. Arrangements will then be made through the chairmen to have competent nurses from either hospital give the initial instructions in the making of these dressings. It is expected that the telephone will be installed at the headquarters, No. 240 Fair street, not later than the first of the week. The number will be published in the local papers, and then any group of women, church organizations, clubs or individuals, will be given necessary instructions for the work.

After discussing the advisability of holding a big Red Cross mass meeting in the near future, the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the chair.

Donations That are Desired.

It will be noted from the foregoing, that the funds of the chapter are very limited for the work which will need to be immediately undertaken. Certain equipment and supplies will be needed and the Red Cross officers do not hesitate to ask that, if it be possible, such equipment be loaned or donated. A long table that could be used for cutting purposes, making of dressings, etc., is needed. A plain unpainted table will do very well. A cupboard or closet in which to keep completed articles is necessary, as is a small desk with drawers that can be locked. A used type-writer would very greatly facilitate the clerical work. And any person so desiring, may contribute money specifically for the purchase of outing flannel for hospital garments, gauze, etc., for surgical dressings, etc., etc. Such donations may either be left at the headquarters, or taken to the treasurer, Joseph M. Schaeffer, State of New York National Bank, and should be definitely designated as to their use.

Additional Enrollments.

The following additional names have been enrolled: Mrs. E. A. Abrams, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hibbard, Mrs. A. V. Claflin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tobey, Roger Loughran, E. F. Mac Fadden, Miss Grace E. Jansen, Mrs. Goodrich, Miss Winifred Sullivan, Miss Kate Walton, Miss O'Connor, Miss Herbert, Mrs. Rodney Osterhoudt, Benedictine Sisters.

REICHSTAG HEARS KAISER ACCUSED OF STARTING WAR

Socialists Cheer Kunert When He Praises Example of Progress Set by Russia—Says Emperor Was One of Chief Instigators of War.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Amsterdam, March 24—Emperor William was accused of being one of the chief instigators of the war by Herr Kunert, a Socialist in a speech in the Reichstag on Thursday, says a despatch from Berlin today.

The attack was one of the most bitter made upon the Kaiser since the war began.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, also was denounced by Herr Kunert. The chancellor, as well as the Kaiser, declared the Socialist orator, had a share of responsibility in bringing on the world conflict.

Herr Kunert referred to the revolution in Russia in a very meaning way. When he was rebuked by Vice-chancellor Helfferich for "insulting the Fatherland" by mentioning Germany and Russia in the same breath, Herr Kunert replied:

"I should be proud to see such progress made in the Fatherland as has been made in Russia."

This remark set the Socialist deputies into wild bursts of cheering.

INSURING AGAINST CITY BOMBARDMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—New Yorkers are scrambling for "bombardment" insurance today, with open hostilities with Germany looming nearer and nearer each day. It is understood that New York insurance brokers have placed more than $10,000,000 worth of insurance against bombardment with Lloyd's of London.

Laws of the United States and state laws prevent American insurance companies from assuming risks of this nature and London is the only market where it may be secured.

Office buildings, stores and warehouses are being insured against damage by bombardment.

ROUND-UP OF TWO JUGS.

Alleged Oasis at Stone Ridge Yielded Booze on Raid.

Testimony was taken this morning before Judge Jenkins at county court chambers in search and seizure proceedings taken by the state excise department against Charles Matage who resides near Stone Ridge. Inspectors of the department testified that on February 13 they had purchased cider and whiskey at Matage's shop. On a search and seizure warrant they procured a jug containing a gallon of whiskey and a jug containing one quart of cherry wine, which they forwarded to the department. P. J. Finn, of the excise department's legal staff, appeared for the department.

TORNADO SWEEPS INDIANA TOWNS; DEAD NUMBER 50

Five Different Places Hit by High Wind Which Levelled the Ground For a Mile in New Albany—Property Damage is $2,000,000.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Albany, Ind., March 23.—The death list in the New Albany catastrophe stood at forty-six at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

"We fear that at least ten more bodies will be found in the ruins," said Mayor Morris.

Reports received today from country districts in southern Indiana say that at least five persons have been killed outside of New Albany.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 24.—More than 40 persons are dead at New Albany, Ind., and two near Carlisle, Ind., while more than 100 are injured as a result of tornadoes which struck in five different places in the state yesterday, according to the best information obtainable. Many of the injured cannot recover in the opinion of physicians at the crowded hospitals in which they are being cared for. The property loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000.

The storm wreaked its greatest destruction of life and property at New Albany, which is located on the Ohio river. In Hendricks, Sullivan, Adams and Jackson counties wide stretches of territory were laid waste by the wind.

Near Danville dwellings and other buildings were levelled for a distance of six miles in a path one mile wide. There was no loss of life.

Near Carlisle, in Sullivan county, a path three-fourths of a mile wide and 18 miles long was cleared. Wesley Hines and Mrs. William Norris were killed.

Near Seymour five persons were injured and a strip four miles long laid waste. The village of Monmouth was struck and much damage caused to property.

The only hospital in New Albany is crowded to capacity with injured and others have been sent across the river to Louisville, Ky. Indiana and Kentucky National Guards and hospital companies have been sent to the town.

The storm struck New Albany without warning. It hit West Union, a sub-division, first and it is believed several children's bodies lie under the ruins of a school building. The wind, moving southwest through the city, swept a path two blocks wide and more than a mile long. It dipped, smashing several blocks, taking its toll of life, then rose, then dipped again across the town and for six miles out into the country.

The steamer Isabella is still on dry dock with repairs completed awaiting a favorable opportunity to resume trips between Catskill and Hudson.

The ferry A. F. Beach is making regular trips between Catskill Point and Greendale.

The ferry George H. Power, running between Athens and Hudson, on Thursday broke the forward rudder in attempting to channel a way through the ice at that point. The ice is pretty well broken up at that point, but in some places is 8 to 9 inches thick.

Catskill reports that Friday the continued thaw and high wind caused the ice in the river to move out at that point.

From Albany comes the statement that the river is open from Troy to Hudson.

Home-coming Americans.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—Bringing a number of Americans from war-torn Europe, the steamer Montserrat arrived today from Cadiz, Spain, with a passenger list of 338. Among them were Dr. W. G. Dervingo, of Holyoke, Mass., who has served 18 months as a surgeon in the French army on the Verdun front; Frederick Dietzmann, American vice-consul at Barman, Germany; Raymond H. Searle, American vice-consul at Leipzig, and 12 American business men.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS SHOWED OUR FLAG

First Torpedo Struck Healdton Under American Banner Painted on Hull—Names of Seven of U. S. Citizens Lost in Attack.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, March 24.—Captain Charles Christopher's official story of the destruction of the American oil tank steamer Healdton by a submarine with the loss of seven American lives and at least thirteen others, will be forwarded to the state department at Washington by American consular representatives.

Rotterdam despaches today quoted Captain Christopher as saying that powerful electric lights were playing upon the United States flag when the attack was made.

"The first torpedo struck us amidships just below the picture of the American banner painted on the side of the hull," said the Healdton's master. "It was followed at once by another."

London newspapers in their comment upon the destruction of this seventh American victim of "U" boats since the Kaiser's relentless submarine war began declare that it shows that ships are nowhere safe, as the Healdton was outside of the barred zone when she was sunk without warning.

The lost Americans are listed in Rotterdam advice as follows:

W. Chandler, Brooklyn; Hudgins, Norfolk, Va.; W. C. Johnson and E. Leveaux, Hoboken, N. J.; George Healey, San Francisco; R. W. Smith, Chicago and John Steiner, Pittsburgh.

SOCIALISTS WANT EX-CZAR INDICTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, via Sayville Wireless, March 24.—Indictment of Nicholas Romanoff, the former czar of Russia, is demanded by the Socialist Party, says advices to the Overseas News Agency today.

The governor-general of Irkutsk, Siberia, and the president of the municipality of Moscow, are among the latest monarchists arrested.

The Overseas Agency says:

"The Socialist party demands that the public attorney issue indictments against Nicholas Romanoff, as the former czar is now known, who, together with the ex-czarina and their sick children are now prisoners of the revolutionists, at Tsarskoe-Selo."

The Frankfurter Zeitung reports the following persons arrested:

The governor general of Irkutsk, the governor of Kursk, the president of Moscow, and a number of other monarchist leaders.

Prince Alexander of Oldenburg, a Russian prince, was on his way from Petrograd on a special train when he was seized and taken back and put in jail.

BUYERS BACK FROM CITY.

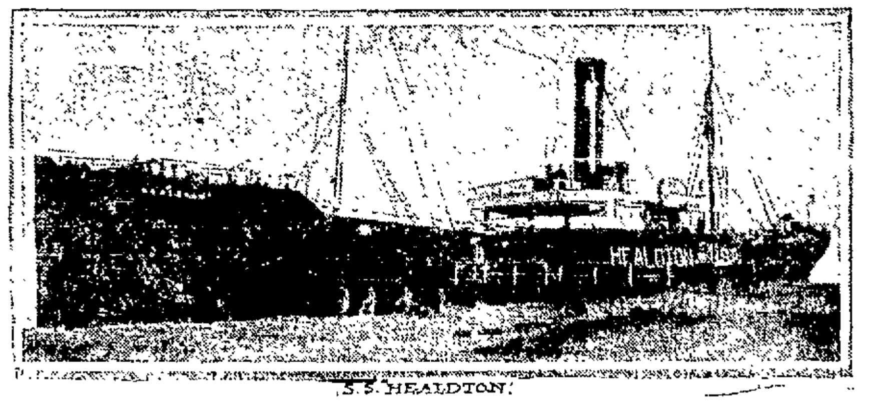
Spring in Evidence in Van Wagenen Store Activity.

Mrs. Nellie Hall Stokes of the millinery department of the L. B. Van Wagenen Company, and Mrs. Jane Van Derburg of the women's apparel department, together with one of her assistants, Miss Laura Cakenheimer, returned Friday night from a business trip of several days in New York city, where they have been making extensive purchases of millinery and apparel of the very latest models, for their large and particular patronage.

All of these women have shown themselves to be expert buyers in that they possess the art to choose articles that are stylish, serviceable, individual and refined, and withal reasonable in price. Having a quick and discerning eye, they note what is being worn by the best-dressed women of New York—that city where our American women are proverbially well dressed, and not alone are their respective departments maintained in the most efficient and satisfactory manner, but the result of their observations is plainly visible in the departments where the smaller accessories of a woman's costume, veils, gloves, collars and cuffs, fancy bags, etc., are to be found at Van Wagenen's.

Dental Robbers Busy.

Tuesday night the dental parlors of Dr. Sweezy in Middletown were broken into and a box containing a large assortment of teeth was stolen. It is believed it was the same gang who were successful in Newburgh.



S. S. HEALDTON.

SEVEN AMERICAN SAILORS BELIEVED U-BOAT VICTIMS.

The American Standard Oil tanker Healdton, bound from Philadelphia for Rotterdam with petroleum, which was torpedoed twenty-five miles north of Terschelling, Holland, by a German submarine without warning. The torpedoing took place in what had been designated by Germany as a "safety zone." The crew of the Healdton included thirteen Americans. A dispatch from Amsterdam states that only six of the thirteen American are among the survivors.

Friday morning when court convened a jury list of 150 names was drawn to be in attendance at supreme court on April 9 when the trial of Edwin Van Aken will be begun. Mr. Van Aken is charged with murdering his wife at her home in Port Ewen on October 22, 1914.

Van Aken had been sentenced to death in the electric chair and at the time of the decision by the court of appeals was in the death house in Sing Sing prison. He was brought back to Ulster county and placed in the county jail where he has since been awaiting trial.

Although confined to jail for a long time Mr. Van Aken when brought in the court room on Friday when the jury list was made up seemed in excellent spirits and health. His attorney, William D. THEATRE WORK TO BE PUSHED ALONG

Cohen Enterprise Ready Now to Receive Bids on Main Building Which Will be Staked Out Monday.

Two of the contracts for the store which will form part of the new Cohen Theater on Wall street were awarded Friday, and bids for the main building are being solicited.

The store will occupy part of the site of the old Wolven store, the remainder of the site being occupied as the theater entrance. The contracts awarded for the store were for electric wiring, which was awarded to the Carl Miller Company, and for the plumbing and heating, which was awarded to Brown & Dressel. The plumbing contract provides for connections with the plumbing of the theater.

The theater building will be staked out on Monday by Architect Girard F. Betz and City Engineer Cedwise. Bids for parts of the construction are expected to be in the hands of the theater corporation during the coming week, some of the estimates being due by Tuesday or Wednesday. These will probably be the estimates for the steel construction, for which the specifications were issued sometimes ago and were the first of the specifications sent out to builders.

Everybody Sick of It.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—All previous records for jury deadlocks in federal court here were broken today when the jury in the case of Rae Tanzer completed sixty-five hours of deliberation without a decision. Rae Tanzer, the diminutive milliner charged with perjury in her breach of promise suit against former District Attorney James W. Osborne, is in a state of collapse today. Judge Van Fleet has been forced to retire to his hotel by illness, and several members of the jury are reported on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

RED CROSS GAINS 315 MEMBERSHIPS

Executive Committee of Ulster County Chapter Meets in New Headquarters And Outlines Program of Continuous Activities.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross was held at the new headquarters in the Preston building on Fair street on Friday afternoon, Mrs. C. N. Reed chairman, presiding. Following the reading and approval of the minutes of the last meeting, as given by the secretary, Mrs. W. N. Fessenden, several letters were read. Some of the communications were from Washington relative to the work, one being a request that the chapter notify the Washington headquarters as to the supplies already on hand. A letter from the daughters of Isabella signified the willingness of the members of this society to cooperate with the Red Cross in any way possible. Another letter from New Paltz, asked that some one from the chapter be sent to form an auxiliary in that village. Such work is being left in the hands of the officers and membership committee, Mrs. C. Gordon Reel, chairman. The secretary stated that application had been made by Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., to take up the work of making comfort bags since the work of making hospital garments was already under way by an efficient committee. It was voted to grant this request.

Fine New Headquarters.

Mrs. Reed then called attention to the fact that the new headquarters, already quite well equipped had been donated to the Red Cross by Mrs Preston, a favor that was indeed appreciated, and on motion of Mr. Schaeffer, the secretary was empowered to write a letter of thanks and appreciation to Mrs Preston. The rug and table with office accessories were donated by Mrs. Reel, the chairs are loaned by the Federation of Women's Clubs, the posters, etc., came from headquarters at Washington or New York. It was stated that through the instrumentality of a prominent and public-spirited citizen a telephone would at once be installed, thus putting the office in shape for transacting business in a proper manner.

The motion was made and carried that Mrs. Conrad E. Hasbrouck be appointed to the regular executive committee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation from town of Dr. Mary Gage-Day. It was further voted that the chairman of all working committees of the chapter be made members of the executive committee, in order to facilitate the work of the organization.

Membership Growing.

Mrs. Fessenden reported on the membership, which included a brief report of the formation of the auxiliaries in Saugerties and Marlborough and the organization of another tomorrow in Milton, and also of the effective work of the local membership committee under the energetic and capable chairmanship of Mrs. Reel. The membership of the chapter last year was 97. Now the total membership is 412, of which there are 182 members in Kingston; 160 in Saugerties, 34 in Marlborough and 36 in Milton. In addition to the membership it was stated that there are completed 11 pair of hospital pajamas, 10 hospital night shirts, made of outing flannel; 75 comfort bags; several packages of surgical dressings; a number of hospital garments, all the latter having been made in Saugerties. Miss Ougheltree, chairman of the hospital garments committee, stated that the committee would be ready to go on at once with the work, if another set of patterns could be provided, as it was a loss of time to wait for the patterns sent from Washington to be loaned around. Patterns will be secured.

Vote Expenses For Work.

The matter of travelling expenses for the chapter officers who go to the various villages in the county to form auxiliaries, came up and it was voted that such expenses be met by the chapter. Mr. Schaeffer, treasurer, reported $223 now on hand with which to purchase supplies and carry forward the work of the chapter. It was moved and carried that the chair be authorized to appoint a regular auditing committee of three members. Later the committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. C. E. Hasbrouck, Everett Fowler and J. E. Mahar.

The question of operating the office was then presented, particular reference being made to the desirability of keeping the same open throughout the day. In order to do this it would be necessary to have some one efficient, and interested in attendance. After considerable careful discussion it was voted to keep the headquarters office open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, and the chair was authorized to secure the services of the proper person, at a salary not in excess of a specified amount.

Work on Dressings.

So far no work has been undertaken by the local chapter in the making of surgical dressing. Both Drs. O'Meara and Norwood, joint chairmen of the surgical dressings committee were present, and spoke on this subject. It was decided that a call should be issued to the women of Kingston, whether enrolled members of the Red Cross or not, to at once begin work on the making of these surgical dressings. A sample case will be secured from Washington, and necessary supplies will be secured to begin work. Arrangements will then be made through the chairmen to have competent nurses from either hospital give the initial instructions in the making of these dressings. It is expected that the telephone will be installed at the headquarters, No. 240 Fair street, not later than the first of the week. The number will be published in the local papers, and then any group of women, church organizations, clubs or individuals, will be given necessary instructions for the work.

After discussing the advisability of holding a big Red Cross mass meeting in the near future, the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the chair.

Donations That are Desired.

It will be noted from the foregoing, that the funds of the chapter are very limited for the work which will need to be immediately undertaken. Certain equipment and supplies will be needed and the Red Cross officers do not hesitate to ask that, if it be possible, such equipment be loaned or donated. A long table that could be used for cutting purposes, making of dressings, etc., is needed. A plain unpainted table will do very well. A cupboard or closet in which to keep completed articles is necessary, as is a small desk with drawers that can be locked. A used type-writer would very greatly facilitate the clerical work. And any person so desiring, may contribute money specifically for the purchase of outing flannel for hospital garments, gauze, etc., for surgical dressings, etc., etc. Such donations may either be left at the headquarters, or taken to the treasurer, Joseph M. Schaeffer, State of New York National Bank, and should be definitely designated as to their use.

Additional Enrollments.

The following additional names have been enrolled: Mrs. E. A. Abrams, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hibbard, Mrs. A. V. Claflin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tobey, Roger Loughrau, E. F. Mac Fadden, Miss Grace E. Jansen, Mrs. Goodrich, Miss Winifred Sullivan, Miss Kate Walton, Miss O'Connor, Miss Herbert, Mrs. Rodney Osterhoudt, Benedictine Sisters.

REICHSTAG HEARS KAISER ACCUSED OF STARTING WAR

Socialists Cheer Kunert When He Praises Example of Progress Set by Russia—Says Emperor Was One of Chief Instigators of War.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Amsterdam, March 24.—Emperor William was accused of being one of the chief instigators of the war by Herr Kunert, a Socialist in a speech in the Reichstag on Thursday, says a despatch from Berlin today.

The attack was one of the most bitter made upon the Kaiser since the war began.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, also was denounced by Herr Kunert. The chancellor, as well as the Kaiser, declared the Socialist orator, had a share of responsibility in bringing on the world conflict.

Herr Kunert referred to the revolution in Russia in a very meaning way. When he was rebuked by Vice-chancellor Helfferich for "insulting the Fatherland" by mentioning Germany and Russia in the same breath, Herr Kunert replied:

"I should be proud to see such progress made in the Fatherland as has been made in Russia."

This remark set the Socialist deputies into wild bursts of cheering.

INSURING AGAINST CITY BOMBARDMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 24.—New Yorkers are scrambling for "bombardment" insurance today, with open hostilities with Germany looming nearer and nearer each day. It is understood that New York insurance brokers have placed more than $10,000,000 worth of insurance against bombardment with Lloyd's of London.

Laws of the United States and state laws prevent American insurance companies from assuming risks of this nature and London is the only market where it may be secured.

Office buildings, stores and warehouses are being insured against damage by bombardment.

ROUND-UP OF TWO JUGS.

Alleged Oasis at Stone Ridge Yielded Booze on Raid.

Testimony was taken this morning before Judge Jenkins at county court chambers in search and seizure proceedings taken by the state excise department against Charles Matage who resides near Stone Ridge. Inspectors of the department testified that on February 13 they had purchased cider and whiskey at Matage's shop. On a search and seizure warrant they procured a jug containing a gallon of whiskey and a jug containing one quart of cherry wine, which they forwarded to the department. P. J. Finn, of the excise department's legal staff, appeared for the department.

WANT "ADS INSERTED AT THE SMALL COST OF CENT-A-WORD

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Soon be time for potatoes to take a drop in price," said the street corner politician to his friend.

"How is that?" asked the friend.

"Soon be planting time and in a month or so new potatoes will be coming into the market," explained the politician.

"It's awful," said the friend, "the way everything is boosted in price."

"Yes you are right there," said the politician, "but there is only one way that I know of to overcome the high cost of living."

"What's that?" asked the friend.

"In the first place," explained the politician, "you can go over to Europe and purchase stuff grown and raised in this country cheaper than you can buy it here."

"So I have heard," said the friend.

"And that in spite of the fact that the stuff over there has to pay duty and the cost of freighting it across the ocean," continued the politician, "even American beef can be bought cheaper in Europe than in this country."

"But what's your plan?" asked the friend.

"Very simple," retorted the politician, "just get congress to pass a law."

"Congress pass a law? What kind of a law?" asked the friend.

"A law prohibiting the selling of stuff beyond a certain price," explained the politician. "Take potatoes for instance and fix the maximum price at $1 a bushel. It is not so long ago you could buy all the potatoes you wanted for a dollar a bushel and even then you thought you were paying a big price."

"That's so," commented the friend.

"Then follow with all other food articles from beef to vegetables," continued the politician, "and place a fair maximum on them, and make it punishable by a jail sentence to sell any article of food beyond the maximum price."

"I get the idea," said the friend, "they can sell lower than the maximum price but not any higher."

"That's it," said the politician, "and by having such a law it would not be any use to corner the market and hold articles of food for a higher price."

"They are doing practically that in Europe now," explained the politician, "and from what I gather if any merchant is caught charging more than a fixed price they swoop down on him and take over his stock of goods as well."

"That would not work in this country," argued the friend.

"How do you know?" asked the politician.

"Because it wouldn't," said the friend.

"That's all you know about it," retorted the politician.

"Taking that law as a foundation," said the politician after a pause in the conversational stream, "it could be worked out in every other line."

"I doubt it," retorted the friend.

"Well you will have to show me," said the politician.

"Why if congress passed such a law they would lose a big vote," argued the friend.

"That's a question," said the politician.

"Well you will never see such a law passed in this country," retorted the friend.

"That's what they thought in Europe," said the politician.

"But they are at war over there," argued the friend, "and that is why they are doing it."

"That's all true enough," said the politician, "but we are certainly paying war prices for everything we are buying now."

"I agree with you on that proposition," said the friend.

"I am glad you do," replied the politician dryly.

Well, What of It.

A newspaper account of a fight between the police and a mob of strikers, mentioning that there were many women among the rioters, said that one Amazon "sank her teeth in a policeman's wrist." The item failed to state whether they were artificial and stayed sunk, or natural and came to the surface.

Sure!

"It says here that the villain looked daggers," said the Old Fogy, as he looked up from the book he was reading. "How can a man look daggers?" "He can have a steely glitter in his eye, can't he?" returned the Grouch.

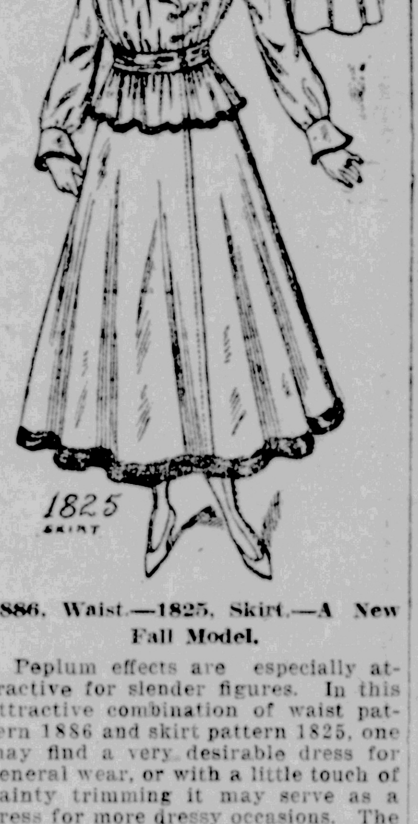
Studies in Sacrifice.

"Do you think women ought to take an active part in politics?" "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But I'm afraid that a girl who sacrifices her life to politics is going to have something like the customary experience of a girl who marries a man to reform him."

OUR DAILY PATTERN.



1886, Waist.—1825, Skirt.—A New Fall Model.

Peplum effects are especially attractive for slender figures. In this attractive combination of waist pattern 1886 and skirt pattern 1825, one may find a very desirable dress for general wear, or with a little touch of dainty trimming it may serve as a dress for more dressy occasions. The waist fronts cross in surplice style and are outlined with broad ripple revers, that meet a smart, broad collar. The sleeves are in the new fashionable wrist length, and are finished with a shaped cuff. The skirt is circular, is cut with ripple fulness and has a side closing. In brown wool poplin, with facings of satin and a band of fur to edge collar and skirt, his model will be very attractive. The waist pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. The skirt pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure. It requires 6⅛ yards of 44 inch material for the entire dress in a medium size. The skirt measures 3¼ yards at the foot.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns, which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps by The Freeman Pattern Department. Be sure to state size wanted.

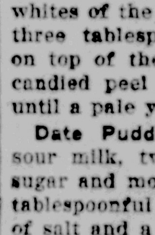
SOME FAVORITE RECIPES.



We do not all enjoy the same dishes, but perhaps there will be a few in this column which you will find new and like to try.

Carrot Pudding.—Take a cupful each of grated carrots, potatoes, brown sugar, chopped suet, stoned raisins and currants, two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of mixed spices, half a teaspoonful each of nutmeg and salt, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water; mix well and add a cupful of cherries, pineapple or peaches and steam three hours. Serve with any desired sauce.

Khaki Pudding.—Peel, core and slice six apples; put them into a saucepan with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, two of butter and two of candied lemon peel, or the grated rind; add a quarter of a cupful of water and cook until smooth; put through a sieve and add three egg yolks. Line a deep pudding dish with pastry, put in the apples and bake until the eggs are set. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, then add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, place on top of the pudding, decorate with candied peel and brown in the oven until a pale yellow.

Date Pudding.—Take a cupful of sour milk, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and molasses, mixed together, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little warm water; then add a pound of stoned and chopped dates, and two cupfuls of graham flour. Steam for two hours, then dry off in the oven for a few minutes. This may be resteamed several times. Serve with a hard sauce.

Yankee Float.—Scald a quart of milk. Mix together three egg yolks, a cupful of sugar, and vanilla and nutmeg to flavor. Cook a tablespoonful of cornstarch, mixed with two tablespoonfuls of cold milk; cook in the hot milk until well cooked, then mix all together and pour into a serving dish. Beat the whites of the eggs very stiff, drop by spoonfuls on top of boiling water to cook; then lift carefully and place on top of the pudding. Serve very cold.

Cold boiled fish mixed with salad dressing and served on lettuce makes a fine salad.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Is there any lost motion at all desirable or essential in the steering wheel or gear and would a small amount make steering easier or safer?

Some drivers prefer a slight amount of looseness in the steering gear, believing that the front wheels hold the road better than if there is no play in them. This probably makes steering easier, if not excessive, although it cannot be said to be as safe.

Is it advisable to use shellac or graphite on leaky gasoline pipes?

Shellac has been recommended as a temporary repair. Another temporary repair of a leaky gasoline line is to wrap it with electrician's rubber tape. The gasoline soon eats through this, but it usually lasts long enough to do the work.

What is the efficiency of a friction drive, disregarding the loss on bearings due to excessive pressure for frictional purposes?

In cars of light weight the friction loss is very little if any greater than in a sliding gear construction and no more and probably not as much as in a planetary construction. An unscientific construction in any type can bring about a great power loss through friction.

How can one prevent too much oil in the two forward cylinders of a car? The crank case has a circulating pump that pumps the oil from the subcase into the front end of the crank case where it flows back into the rest of the case.

This is caused by worn pistons. It is possible that new rings will help, but the chances are that new pistons are necessary.

My car will not fire regularly on the rear cylinder. I have had the valves ground, the carbon removed, new piston rings fitted, but still there is no compression on the rear cylinder. What is the matter?

The poor compression may be due to improperly adjusted or poorly timed valves. This is a common cause and very often after grinding the operator forgets to readjust the tappets. Cylinder leaks may be causing the trouble. Perhaps the leak is around the spark plug or the cylinder plug openings. A little paste stove blacking on the threads will prevent leaking at these places. Do not use too much of the paste but just enough to cover the threads lightly. The piston rings' ends may be in line and thus cause the gas to escape in the lane made by the rings. The piston itself may be loose or the cylinder worn a little.

Sometimes while running in high speed the gear lever of my car suddenly jumps in the neutral position. What is the cause of this?

The jaws of the direct drive may be worn so that they slip out of mesh. Or any of the connections may be loose between the lever and the gear shift.

A general tightening up of the gear shift control connections may relieve the trouble permanently.

What can I do to the lining of my brakes to make them hold when they are glazed, with the wire showing through the fabric?

Evidently your brake linings are badly worn out. The best thing to do is to have the brakes relined. There is practically nothing you can do to linings that are badly worn out except to replace them.

My car has had a knock in the front end of the motor for about a year. When the motor is in high gear on the road the knock resembles hitting a pan with a large wooden mallet, making a heavy thud, loud and regular with the exhaust of the motor. I have had a new front bushing put in the front bearing and had the crank shaft put in a lathe and smoothed up the front end and had a bushing made to fit it, also all main bearings adjusted tightly. When the crank shaft was put in the lathe we found it perfectly true, and after putting both new bushings in the front bearing it stopped this knocking for only about two or three weeks, when it was as bad as ever again. Can you tell me what to do about this?

The fact that you hear the knock less distinctly when the motor is idling leads to the conclusion that it is probably a bearing knock, as that would naturally become most pronounced under load. It may be that you adjusted the main bearings too tightly when you had the bushings renewed, and this has unduly worn them out, causing a return of the conditions that existed before you put in new bushings. They must be fitted snugly, but not so tightly as to bind or cause undue frictional wear.

It might be that you have a loose connecting rod bearing or even a worn wrist pin bearing. Either of these might cause the kind of knock you mention. The fact that it ceased after the bearings were taken up and rebushed before leads to the diagnosis that it was bearing trouble.

It is not likely that the pump would cause any such knock, especially as the noise is intensified under load. Further, the knock might not come from the front of the engine at all. Possibly the flywheel is loose on the shaft, but this is more remote than the bearings as a cause.

Has a medium short stroke motor as much power with a crank shaft two and one-half inches in diameter as one with the same stroke and bore using a crankshaft one and one-fourth or one and one-half inches in diameter? Is not the larger one too much like an eccentric?

The larger diameter crank shaft would give the more power, as it would offer the greater rigidity, which is one of the big aims in motor construction. The increase in angularity or eccentricity you speak of would not occur, as the center of the crankpin will be the same distance from the center of the crank shaft irrespective of the diameter of the pin bearing. It is only a question of having enough crank case space to accommodate the larger parts. With the larger diameter shaft you get more bearing surface and consequently higher efficiency.

On opening a storage battery which was out of order I found in the bottom and extending up about one-third on the plates of it a gray jelly substance. What is it and what is the cause of such an accumulation?

The accumulation may have been mud accumulations formed from deposits by the disintegration of active material from the positive plate. This accumulation is due to the gradual disintegration of this material from charging and discharging and also to material getting loosened by vibration.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of the splash system of lubrication?

The chief advantages of the splash system of lubrication are its simplicity and inexpensiveness. The chief disadvantages are that the amount of oil supplied to the cylinders usually decreases as the motor speeds up, whereas the amount of oil should be increased. This is because at high speeds the oil does not have time to settle to its level before the connecting rods come around again and they do not dip enough oil. In some motors this is compensated for by lifting the oil trough as the throttle is opened or as the engine speeds up.

Kindly inform me of the relative merits of the several types of gasoline feed. So far as I know there are three types: Gravity, vacuum and force feed, by air pressure. I have air pressure feed and am always uneasy about leaks developing. Can one feel more secure with other types or is he warranted in feeling greater security?

Gravity feed, though usually efficient in level districts, sometimes fails to give best results when ascending steep grades. Even if entirely efficient gravity feed requires location of the main gasoline tank either in the cowl or under the front seat, locations both dangerous and inconvenient.

Pressure feed requires an elaborate system of tubing and pressure pump and needs constant attention on the part of the driver. Leaks are frequent. Its construction permits carrying the gasoline tank in the rear, where it belongs, while at the same time forces the gasoline to the carburetor faster than needed, resulting in waste because of unconsumed gas.

Vacuum feed permits carrying the main gasoline tank in the right place—that is, in the rear—and carries gasoline unfailingly to the carburetor without attention. A saving of gasoline consumption of from 10 to 12 per cent is shown over pressure feed, although no saving is shown over gravity feed.

Can you tell me the cause of a slight grinding noise in the transmission of my car? It is most noticeable in first and second speeds. Is it caused by worn bearings?

The grinding noise is probably due to wear in the gears and not to any bearing wear. If your clutch has been in the habit of sticking and not releasing completely, due to its being slightly out of order, the gears have been spinning when the shifts were made, with the result that the gear teeth are badly burred and worn. Nothing will make a more unpleasant grinding noise than old gears under load. The fact that you do not notice this noise so much in high is an indication that it is gear trouble, as you are not driving through the gears then. There is no remedy except replacement for worn gears.

What would be the effect of a salt water solution on different parts of a motor? Please tell me whether or not it is injurious and how.

You undoubtedly refer to a salt water solution when used as a radiator anti-freeze. You may or may not know that the hardware, propellers, etc., on ocean going yachts are made of bronze or brass because of the fact that iron, no matter how dressed with paint, will quickly rust, due to the action of the salt water. The same trouble will occur if it is used in a motorcar engine.

What is meant by piston displacement and how is it figured?

The amount of space in the cylinder between the point where the top of the piston comes on the top of the stroke and the point where the top of the piston comes on the bottom of the stroke. It is figured by squaring the bore and multiplying by 0.7854 times the stroke times the number of cylinders.

CHANDLER SIX
$1395

Chandler Records Are Owners' Records

Not to our knowledge has a professional motor car driver ever made a record with a Chandler Six.

But all the thousands of owners of Chandler Sixes, every day, are making the kind of records that count. Records of satisfactory service.

The Chandler Company has never built a racing car. Chandler owners do not want racing cars.

The 55 to 60 miles per hour speed that every Chandler car will do is speed much greater than you would ever ask for.

The Chandler Company has never built a special mountain-climbing car with short wheel base and low gear ratio.

The ease with which every Chandler climbs steep grades on high gear is satisfying to the Chandler owner.

The Chandler Company has never supplied any Chandler dealer anywhere with a special gear ratio for demonstrating purposes.

What any Chandler Six does your Chandler Six will do.

The manufacturer of one six can make just as big claims as the manufacturer of any other six. But

The Chandler is a Fact-Car, Not a Claim-Car. And These Are Facts, Not Claims.

There is no other six more flexible in control, more responsive to your every demand, than the Chandler.

There is no other which will pull hard grades on high with greater ease.

There is no other so economical in operation.

There is no other which embodies in its design and construction so many features characteristic of high-grade, high-priced motor cars.

There is no other of more beautiful body lines or greater riding comfort.

Where many other well-known Sixes in the medium-priced field offer you heavy cast-iron crank cases, the Chandler offers you a cast aluminum crank-case — a feature of the Packard, Pierce-Arrow, Winton, White, Stutz, Mercer and Cadillac.

Where many other Sixes offer you noisy gear-drive for the motor shafts, Chandler offers you the silent chain drive — a feature of the Packard, Winton, Mercer and Cadillac.

The big aluminum Chandler crank-case extends from frame to frame both at the front and the rear of the motor, giving perfect rigidity to the engine-mounting and saving it from the rack and stress of the road — a feature of the Packard, Locomobile, Winton, Stutz and Mercer.

Where other Sixes offer you battery ignition, Chandler gives you Bosch High Tension Magneto, the world's finest system of ignition — a feature of the Pierce-Arrow, Locomobile, Winton, White, Stutz and Mercer.

As in the highest priced, high-grade cars, also, Chandler uses the light-running, annular ball bearings in transmission, differential and rear wheels; full floating rear axle with silent spiral bevel differential; two unit starting and lighting system — and many other features of proven excellence.

Through four years of conscientious manufacturing effort backed up by a previous experience of many years in the building of high-priced sixes, the exclusive Chandler Motor has been developed and refined to a point approximating perfection. It is a fact-motor, not a claim-motor. See it perform. Drive it. Learn how it stands up.

CHEMICAL WORKERS WEARING GAS MASKS. © KADEL & HERBERT SUPPLIED BY INTERNATIONAL

WHERE THE GAS MASK ORIGINATED.

Many believe that the gas mask was an invention of the present war, but they are wrong. When the Germans introduced the use of poisonous gases in attack, the Allies at first were unable to cope with their deadliness. After a few such attacks, however, war turned to industry and there found the means of nullifying the use of poisonous gas by the use of the gas mask.

Gas masks have been used in many industries for many years. The picture shows how young women employed in handling dangerous chemicals at the Bush Terminal, New York, wear masks which protect them from deadly fumes and sparks.

PEEKING AT THE FUTURE

WE have seen the candle flee from the flare of the lamp, the lamp give way to gas and gaslight make room for electricity.

Yet, these are but small evidences of man's eternal reach for the perfect.

So, who shall say that we will not soon see every form of injurious drink decoction succumb to a sane and sensible use of pure brews like our which, being truly a liquid food, is healthful and therefore helpful.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Soon be time for potatoes to take a drop in price," said the street corner politician to his friend.

"How is that?" asked the friend.

"Soon be planting time and in a month or so new potatoes will be coming into the market," explained the politician.

"It's awful," said the friend, "the way everything is boosted in price."

"Yes you are right there," said the politician, "but there is only one way that I know of to overcome the high cost of living."

"What's that?" asked the friend.

"In the first place," explained the politician, "you can go over to Europe and purchase stuff grown and raised in this country cheaper than you can buy it here."

"So I have heard," said the friend.

"And that in spite of the fact that the stuff over there has to pay duty and the cost of freighting it across the ocean," continued the politician, "even American beef can be bought cheaper in Europe than in this country."

"But what's your plan?" asked the friend.

"Very simple," retorted the politician, "just get congress to pass a law."

"Congress pass a law? What kind of a law?" asked the friend.

"A law prohibiting the selling of stuff beyond a certain price," explained the politician. "Take potatoes for instance and fix the maximum price at $1 a bushel. It is not so long ago you could buy all the potatoes you wanted for a dollar a bushel and even then you thought you were paying a big price."

"That's so," commented the friend.

"Then follow with all other food articles from beef to vegetables," continued the politician, "and place a fair maximum on them, and make it punishable by a jail sentence to sell any article of food beyond the maximum price."

"I get the idea," said the friend, "they can sell lower than the maximum price but not any higher."

"That's it," said the politician, "and by having such a law it would not be any use to corner the market and hold articles of food for a higher price."

"They are doing practically that in Europe now," explained the politician, "and from what I gather if any merchant is caught charging more than a fixed price they swoop down on him and take over his stock of goods as well."

"That would not work in this country," argued the friend.

"How do you know?" asked the politician.

"Because it wouldn't," said the friend.

"That's all you know about it," retorted the politician.

"Taking that law as a foundation," said the politician after a pause in the conversational stream, "it could be worked out in every other line."

"I doubt it," retorted the friend.

"Well you will have to show me," said the politician.

"Why if congress passed such a law they would lose a big vote," argued the friend.

"That's a question," said the politician.

"Well you will never see such a law passed in this country," retorted the friend.

"That's what they thought in Europe," said the politician.

"But they are at war over there," argued the friend, "and that is why they are doing it."

"That's all true enough," said the politician, "but we are certainly paying war prices for everything we are buying now."

"I agree with you on that proposition," said the friend.

"I am glad you do," replied the politician dryly.

Well, What of It.

A newspaper account of a fight between the police and a mob of strikers, mentioning that there were many women among the rioters, said that one Amazon "sank her teeth in a policeman's wrist." The item failed to state whether they were artificial and stayed sunk, or natural and came to the surface.

Sure!

"It says here that the villain looked daggers," said the Old Fogy, as he looked up from the book he was reading. "How can a man look daggers?" "He can have a steely glitter in his eye, can't he?" returned the Grouch.

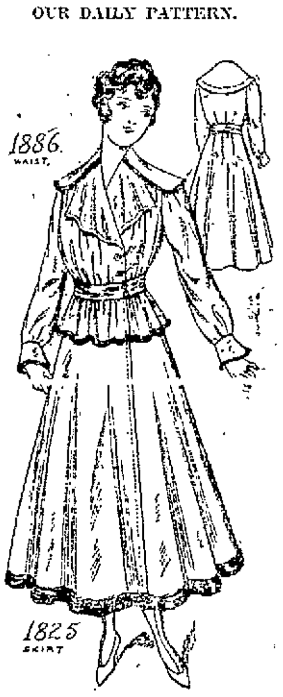
OUR DAILY PATTERN.



1886, Waist.—1825, Skirt.—A New Fall Model.

Peplum effects are especially attractive for slender figures. In this attractive combination of waist pattern 1886 and skirt pattern 1825, one may find a very desirable dress for general wear, or with a little touch of dainty trimming it may serve as a dress for more dressy occasions. The waist fronts cross in surplice style and are outlined with broad ripple revers, that meet a smart, broad collar. The sleeves are in the new fashionable wrist length, and are finished with a shaped cuff. The skirt is circular, is cut with ripple fulness and has a side closing. In brown wool poplin, with facings of satin and a band of fur to edge collar and skirt, his model will be very attractive. The waist pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. The skirt pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure. It requires 6¼ yards of 44 inch material for the entire dress in a medium size. The skirt measures 3¼ yards at the foot.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns, which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps by The Freeman Pattern Department. Be sure to state size wanted.

SOME FAVORITE RECIPES.

We do not all enjoy the same dishes, but perhaps there will be a few in this column which you will find new and like to try.

Carrot Pudding.—Take a cupful each of grated carrots, potatoes, brown sugar, chopped suet, stoned raisins and currants, two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of mixed spices, half a teaspoonful each of nutmeg and salt, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water; mix well and add a cupful of cherries, pineapple or peaches and steam three hours. Serve with any desired sauce.

Khaki Pudding.—Peel, core and slice six apples; put them into a saucepan with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, two of butter and two of candied lemon peel, or the grated rind; add a quarter of a cupful of water and cook until smooth; put through a sieve and add three egg yolks. Line a deep pudding dish with pastry, put in the apples and bake until the eggs are set. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, then add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, place on top of the pudding, decorate with candied peel and brown in the oven until a pale yellow.

Date Pudding.—Take a cupful of sour milk, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar and molasses, mixed together, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little warm water; then add a pound of stoned and chopped dates, and two cupfuls of graham flour. Steam for two hours, then dry off in the oven for a few minutes. This may be resteamed several times. Serve with a hard sauce.

Yankee Float.—Scald a quart of milk. Mix together three egg yolks, a cupful of sugar, and vanilla and nutmeg to flavor. Cook a tablespoonful of cornstarch, mixed with two tablespoonfuls of cold milk; cook in the hot milk until well cooked, then mix all together and pour into a serving dish. Beat the whites of the eggs very stiff, drop by spoonfuls on top of boiling water to cook; then lift carefully and place on top of the pudding. Serve very cold.

Cold boiled fish mixed with salad dressing and served on lettuce makes a fine salad.

PACIFISTS ARE NOT NEW.

Both Shakespeare and Cervantes understood the "pacifist" spirit. Observant and given to reflection far beyond ordinary men, they could not fail to recognize and dissect it, for it has existed in all ages. When Prof. Henry R. Muzzy of Columbia University says that "the loss of some hundreds of American lives is not worth going to war for" and complains that "we are asked to fight for honor, a vague something we do not understand" he plants himself beside the pacifist of the Elizabethan age whom Shakespeare satirized three hundred years ago in these words given to Falstaff:

> Can honour set a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is honour? A word. What is that word honour? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible then? Yea, to the dead. Therefore, I'll none of it; honour is a mere scutcheon; and so ends my catechism.

When Prof. David Starr Jordan protests to the Secretary of War against General Wood's preparedness speeches "urging the necessity of war against a nation with which we are at peace," thus dismissing as of no importance serious injuries both physical and moral and virtually counselling meek submission thereto, he merely modernizes the following argument placed by Cervantes in the mouth of Sancho Panza:

> Sir, I am a peaceable, tame, quiet man, and can dissemble any injury whatsoever; for I have a wife and children to maintain and bring up; so that gives me leave, sir, to tell you, by way of hint, since it is not my part to command, that I will upon no account draw my sword, either against peasant or against knight; and that, from this time forward, in the presence of God, I forgive all injuries any one has done, or shall do me, or that any person is now doing, or may hereafter do me, whether he be high or low, rich or poor, gentle or simple, without excepting any state or condition whatsoever.

What Prof. Muzzy, Prof. Jordan and the other pacifists of their type overlook, as Falstaff and Sancho Panza did before them, is that "honor" is merely another term for human rights, including the right to live in peace, freedom and safety, and that meek submission to aggression and wrong merely saves the individual's or the nation's skin for the moment while all the more surely forging the chains of permanent injustice and oppression. The extreme pacifist of all ages blindly desires to occupy as unenviable a position as is alleged to be that of New York City, which at the present time, according to Miss Agnes Repplier, is "as succulent as a soft-shell crab and as defenseless."

The Supreme Court's decision upholding the eight-hour law while affirming the right of Congress to compel arbitration of labor disputes has pleased and displeased both sides to the controversy. Labor is assured of the eight-hour law, but must accept the principle of compulsory arbitration which it has long opposed. The railroads rejoice in the latter but complain of the vast increase in expenses involved in the former. Both sides having won a part of what they have contended for, however, satisfaction to this limited extent ought to pave the way toward a peaceable adjustment of all difficulties. The court's decision, in brief, is that it is within the province of Congress not only to compel the railroads to conform to a certain standard of wages and hours of employment, but to compel railroad men who enter such employment to submit to compulsory arbitration, or to whatever measures may be provided by law, in order to keep the channels of commerce open. The impartial spectator is not likely to find anything revolutionary in this. The long-established power of Congress to fix railroad rates would seem of itself to involve the right to require a certain standard of hours and wages. As for compulsory arbitration of disputes in order to prevent a tie-up of commerce at a critical period or at any time, such power would seem to be an essential part of sovereignty. Without such police power government would be little more than a name, and to resign it would virtually involve abdication.

The sudden and unforeseen descent from Czar of all the Russians to plain Mr. Nicholas Romanoff is a startling reminder of the mutability of human affairs. The Emperor of Germany is reported to be "sad and nervous" as he contemplates it and well he may be, for a similar descent from imperial Kaiser to plain Mr. William Hohenzollern is not impossible. Improbable perhaps but yet possible, in view of the increasing restlessness in Germany and the open denunciation of "the sins of those in power" made by prominent representatives of the numerically strong Socialist party whose organs are calling loudly for democracy. The Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, which supports the present government, is quoted as saying that "the peril threatening Germany's future would be formidably increased if a State with a democratic constitution were to arise also on her eastern frontier." Doubtless the chief peril apprehended is the spread of the contagion of democracy from east and west into the heart of Germany itself. It has been asserted that the Germans, outside of the Socialist ranks, have no leaning toward democracy, that they prefer exactly the sort of government they live under, and that the habit of unquestioning obedience to those in the seats of the mighty is so ingrained as to have become second nature. But this is what until recently the whole world thought of the masses of the Russian people, who, indeed, were not only supposed to be wholly loyal to their Czar but to regard him with superstitious veneration as an autocrat of Divine appointment. The world did not dream of Russia's rapid revolution of thought, and is perhaps equally ignorant of the present intellectual undercurrents in Germany.

A High Caste Oriental.

In San Francisco there was a leading lawyer who prided himself on his astuteness in questioning Chinese witnesses. He once failed to note that the dress of a Chinese witness was of finer texture than that worn by an ordinary coolie.

Instead of asking the usual questions as to age, occupation, etc., the following dialogue ensued:

What is your name?
Sell Lung.
Do you live in San Francisco?
Yes.
You sabe God?

Mr. Attorney, if you mean do I understand the entity of our Creator, I will simply reply that on Thursday evening next I shall address the State Ministerial Association upon the subject of the Divinity of Christ, and shall be pleased if you will attend."

To the day of his death the celebrated lawyer will never escape the question, "Do you sabe God "—Case and Comment.

Why Tempt Fate?

Softly the nurse smoothed the sufferer's pillow. He had been admitted only that morning and now he looked up pleadingly at the nurse who stood at his bedside.

"An' phwat did ye say the docther's name was, nurse dear?" he asked.

"Dr. Kilpatrick," was the reply. "He's the senior hourse surgeon."

"That settles it," he muttered, firmly, "that docther won't get a chanst to operate on me."

"Why not?" asked the nurse in surprise. "He's a very clever man."

"That's as may be," the patient said. "But me name happens to be Patrick."—New York Globe.

A Natural Result.

"What do you suppose has come over my husband this morning, Sophia?" exclaimed a conscientious little bride to the new servant. "I never saw him start to the station so happy. He's whistling like a lark!"

TAKEN TOO LITERALLY.

That's All That Ailed the Basketball Report, Says Coach.

The basketball game played between the Rhinebeck girls and the Kingston girls on Saturday last was somewhat misrepresented in Monday's Freeman. This was not intentional and we are afraid that the report was taken too literally.

The game was a hard one throughout. Both teams went into win and they showed it from the start. The first half of the game exhibited the best playing ability. The Kingston girls, being favored with the better basket, scored nine points while the Rhinebeck girls worked up five points with the poor basket.

Naturally the Rhinebeck girls intended to change that score when they came upon the field for the second half; likewise the Kingston girls intended to keep their score up. When teams with such intentions face each other, you may be sure that something is going to happen and it did. Some of the minor rules of guarding were omitted and the playing of an open game was forgotten. Each team held the other so closely and fought so well that the third quarter ended a tie, 11-11. It was Rhinebeck's good fortune to have the better basket this half.

The fourth quarter was extremely exciting. No sooner had a Kingston girl secured the ball than it was captured by one of the opposing team and vice versa. This quick interception of the ball was broken now and then by a splendidly thrown field basket, raising the score first on one side and then on the other. The number of points made on fouls were very few although there were many fouls called on each team. The playing of the last three minutes was intense. There was a difference of but one point in the score and one basket could turn the whole thing. The timer's whistle blew leaving the score 15-14 in Rhinebeck's favor. This was a great disappointment to the Kingston girls for they had never before been defeated by the Rhinebeck team. The victors however must have felt very happy, as before they had taken defeat so many times from the Kingstonians.

R. SEIGLE,

MILTON.

Milton, March 24.—One of the most pleasant events of the season occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Clarke on Saturday evening last, the 17th inst., when they celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding. About seventy guests assembled at 5 o'clock and after congratulations were extended to the happy couple a course supper was served. After all were served with a white and green cube of ice cream decorated with a small American flag, Mrs. Hickey King sang the Star Spangled Banner, every one rising and joining in the chorus. Just before the supper was served a prayer of thanksgiving and benediction was offered by the Rev. William G. Westervelt. After supper some musical friends from Newburgh, Mrs. Luthelle Hickey King, soprano; Miss Helen Mabie, pianist; Messrs. William Hill and Harold Vigino, violinists; also George G. Peck, (who played a piano duet with Miss Mabie, delighted the party with their excellent music to the familiar wedding march by Mendelssohn. The bride and groom of 30 years very promptly responded amid hearty applause. Other out of town guests were the Rev. and Mrs. William G. Westervelt, former pastor of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Mr. Northacker of New York city, Mrs. Peters of Newburgh and Mrs. Margaret C. Dietz of Highland, Mrs. Rachel Carpenter, Miss Helen Carpenter and Edmund Carpenter of Marlborough. Many valuable and beautiful gifts were received, including a string of pearls, (significant of the 30th anniversary). At 10 o'clock the guests departed, having spent a most delightful evening.

On Tuesday evening, March 20, Charles Glancey and Miss Phoebe Freer were married at the M. E. parsonage by the Rev. J. S. Lull.

Miss Carola de Leon took a party of young people in her automobile on Saturday last to the Academy of Music, Newburgh, to see Robinson Crusoe. The delighted young people were the Misses Lena Lull, Evelyn Northrip, Masters Albert Lull, William H. Donaldson, Jr., Ivan Warren, Maurice Dayton, chauffeur.

Mrs. Mary M. Clarke, who has been away several weeks, has returned home.

Lester Mackey has resigned his position as clerk at E. F. Patten's store and accepted a position in Newburgh in a grocery store.

Mrs. J. S. Lull and son, Vernon, were in Newburgh on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Woolsey were in Poughkeepsie on Friday.

Mrs. S. B. Taber, Mrs. S. R. Taber, Mrs. Stephen Taber, the Misses de Leon and Hallock attended a suffragist meeting at Kingston on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamm are to occupy Mrs. P. A. Lyon's cottage.

Services in M. E. Church on Sunday, March 25—S. S. at 10, morning worship at 11 o'clock. Subject of sermon, "Ye Belong to Christ." Epworth League devotional meeting at 7 p. m. Topic, "Our South American Missions." Leader, Rev. J. S. Lull. Evening worship at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "The Muck Rake and the Crown."

Mrs. Minerva Mackey and family have moved into the Nelson Purdy house north of the village.

On Saturday, the 17th inst., J. C. Miller completed fifty-two years' residence in America. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, October 31, 1846, and in October, 1865, sailed from Havre, France, in a sailing vessel, reaching New York 63 days later. After serving apprenticeship in New York, 34th street, (where a part of Pennsylvania station is now), came and located in Milton in 1866 and on April 12, 1868, was married to Frederica Meyer Fisher by the Rev. Edgar Clarke, Presbyterian minister, who is still living in the west. In 1875 he became a citizen of the United States. Mr. Miller is still busy in his clothing store on Main street, and takes a lively interest in Milton's welfare.

Milton-on-Hudson Grange has offered first and second prizes for best bird houses built by pupils of School Districts No. 1, 2 and 4.

American Mineral Oil

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT

Use of Mineral Oil.

Dr. Le Tanneur contributes to the Paris Medical some practical points in the use of mineral oil in constipation. The oil, he says, is in no way digested or even modified by the juices of the stomach and intestines. It acts as a lubricant and nothing else, though it tends to heal abrasions of the intestinal wall caused by rough particles of food.

The New York Medical Journal says mineral oil should be taken either before breakfast or after dinner, two tablespoonfuls being a dose. Its use should be continued every day for at least a fortnight, when the bowels will continue to work naturally without it, for the mineral oil is in no sense a cathartic, but it will cure constipation.—Kingston Daily Freeman, February 17, 1917.

Cole Leads

We were the first manufacturers of eight cylinder cars to combine large size and tremendous power with light weight and economy of operation.

The famous chassis on which all Cole models are mounted is the largest, but relatively the lightest Eight built.

Last year we introduced the Springfield Type Body with such sweeping success that it was later adopted by the builder of practically every well-known car.

The Toursedan and Tourcoupe are essentially and unmistakably Cole, even to their names---as well as in details of construction.

These were the first permanent, all-season cars---The first eight cylinder automobiles to offer equal comfort and convenience, both winter and summer, all in one and the same unit, at a single price.

In these, as in many other important and fundamental advanced features, the Cole Eight leads.

All Cole models will be shown at the automobile show. Be sure to see them.

A demonstration of any of our models will show you what the Cole Eight represents in modern motor car construction and value.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Is there any lost motion at all desirable or essential in the steering wheel or gear and would a small amount make steering easier or safer?

Some drivers prefer a slight amount of looseness in the steering gear, believing that the front wheels hold the road better than if there is no play in them. This probably makes steering easier, if not excessive, although it cannot be said to be as safe.

Is it advisable to use shellac or graphite on leaky gasoline pipes?

Shellac has been recommended as a temporary repair. Another temporary repair of a leaky gasoline line is to wrap it with electrician's rubber tape. The gasoline soon eats through this, but it usually lasts long enough to do the work.

What is the efficiency of a friction drive, disregarding the loss on bearings due to excessive pressure for frictional purposes?

In cars of light weight the friction loss is very little if any greater than in a sliding gear construction and no more and probably not as much as in a planetary construction. An unscientific construction in any type can bring about a great power loss through friction.

How can one prevent too much oil in the two forward cylinders of a car? The crank case has a circulating pump that pumps the oil from the subcase into the front end of the crank case where it flows back into the rest of the case.

This is caused by worn pistons. It is possible that new rings will help, but the chances are that new pistons are necessary.

My car will not fire regularly on the rear cylinder. I have had the valves ground, the carbon removed, new piston rings fitted, but still there is no compression on the rear cylinder. What is the matter?

The poor compression may be due to improperly adjusted or poorly timed valves. This is a common cause and very often after grinding the operator forgets to readjust the tappets. Cylinder leaks may be causing the trouble. Perhaps the leak is around the spark plug or the cylinder plug openings. A little paste stove blacking on the threads will prevent leaking at these places. Do not use too much of the paste but just enough to cover the threads lightly. The piston rings' ends may be in line and thus cause the gas to escape in the lane made by the rings. The piston itself may be loose or the cylinder worn a little.

Sometimes while running in high speed the gear lever of my car suddenly jumps in the neutral position. What is the cause of this?

The jaws of the direct drive may be worn so that they slip out of mesh. Or any of the connections may be loose between the lever and the gear shift.

A general tightening up of the gear shift control connections may relieve the trouble permanently.

What can I do to the lining of my brakes to make them hold when they are glazed, with the wire showing through the fabric?

Evidently your brake linings are badly worn out. The best thing to do is to have the brakes relined. There is practically nothing you can do to linings that are badly worn out except to replace them.

My car has had a knock in the front end of the motor for about a year. When the motor is in high gear on the road the knock resembles hitting a pan with a large wooden mallet, making a heavy thud, loud and regular with the exhaust of the motor. I have had a new front bushing put in the front bearing and had the crank shaft put in a lathe and smoothed up the front end and had a bushing made to fit it, also all main bearings adjusted tightly. When the crank shaft was put in the lathe we found it perfectly true, and after putting both new bushings in the front bearing it stopped this knocking for only about two or three weeks, when it was as bad as ever again. Can you tell me what to do about this?

The fact that you hear the knock less distinctly when the motor is idling leads to the conclusion that it is probably a bearing knock, as that would naturally become most pronounced under load. It may be that you adjusted the main bearings too tightly when you had the bushings renewed, and this has unduly worn them out, causing a return of the conditions that existed before you put in new bushings. They must be fitted snugly, but not so tightly as to bind or cause undue frictional wear.

It might be that you have a loose connecting rod bearing or even a worn wrist pin bearing. Either of these might cause the kind of knock you mention. The fact that it ceased after the bearings were taken up and rebushed before leads to the diagnosis that it was bearing trouble.

It is not likely that the pump would cause any such knock, especially as the noise is intensified under load. Further, the knock might not come from the front of the engine at all. Possibly the flywheel is loose on the shaft, but this is more remote than the bearings as a cause.

Has a medium short stroke motor as much power with a crank shaft two and one-half inches in diameter as one with the same stroke and bore using a crankshaft one and one-fourth or one and one-half inches in diameter? Is not the larger one too much like an eccentric?

The larger diameter crank shaft would give the more power, as it would offer the greater rigidity, which is one of the big aims in motor construction. The increase in angularity or eccentricity you speak of would not occur, as the center of the crankpin will be the same distance from the center of the crank shaft irrespective of the diameter of the pin bearing. It is only a question of having enough crank case space to accommodate the larger parts. With the larger diameter shaft you get more bearing surface and consequently higher efficiency.

On opening a storage battery which was out of order I found in the bottom and extending up about one-third on the plates of it a gray jelly substance. What is it and what is the cause of such an accumulation?

The accumulation may have been mud accumulations formed from deposits by the disintegration of active material from the positive plate. This accumulation is due to the gradual disintegration of this material from charging and discharging and also to material getting loosened by vibration.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of the splash system of lubrication?

The chief advantages of the splash system of lubrication are its simplicity and inexpensiveness. The chief disadvantages are that the amount of oil supplied to the cylinders usually decreases as the motor speeds up, whereas the amount of oil should be increased. This is because at high speeds the oil does not have time to settle to its level before the connecting rods come around again and they do not dip enough oil. In some motors this is compensated for by lifting the oil trough as the throttle is opened or as the engine speeds up.

Kindly inform me of the relative merits of the several types of gasoline feed. So far as I know there are three types: Gravity, vacuum and force feed, by air pressure. I have air pressure feed and am always uneasy about leaks developing. Can one feel more secure with other types or is he warranted in feeling greater security?

Gravity feed, though usually efficient in level districts sometimes fails to give best results when ascending steep grades. Even if entirely efficient gravity feed requires location of the main gasoline tank either in the cowl or under the front seat, locations both dangerous and inconvenient.

Pressure feed requires an elaborate system of tubing and pressure pump and needs constant attention on the part of the driver. Leaks are frequent. Its construction permits carrying the gasoline tank in the rear, where it belongs, while at the same time forces the gasoline to the carburetor faster than needed, resulting in waste because of unconsumed gas.

Vacuum feed permits carrying the main gasoline tank in the right place—that is, in the rear—and carries gasoline unfailingly to the carburetor without attention. A saving of gasoline consumption of from 10 to 12 per cent is shown over pressure feed, although no saving is shown over gravity feed.

Can you tell me the cause of a slight grinding noise in the transmission of my car? It is most noticeable in first and second speeds. Is it caused by worn bearings?

The grinding noise is probably due to wear in the gears and not to any bearing wear. If your clutch has been in the habit of sticking and not releasing completely, due to its being slightly out of order, the gears have been spinning when the shifts were made, with the result that the gear teeth are badly burred and worn. Nothing will make a more unpleasant grinding noise than old gears under load. The fact that you do not notice this noise so much in high is an indication that it is gear trouble, as you are not driving through the gears then. There is no remedy except replacement for worn gears.

What would be the effect of a salt water solution on different parts of a motor? Please tell me whether or not it is injurious and how.

You undoubtedly refer to a salt water solution when used as a radiator anti-freeze. You may or may not know that the hardware, propellers, etc., on ocean going yachts are made of bronze or brass because of the fact that iron, no matter how dressed with paint, will quickly rust, due to the action of the salt water. The same trouble will occur if it is used in a motorcar engine.

What is meant by piston displacement and how is it figured?

The amount of space in the cylinder between the point where the top of the piston comes on the top of the stroke and the point where the top of the piston comes on the bottom of the stroke. It is figured by squaring the bore and multiplying by 0.7854 times the stroke times the number of cylinders.

CHANDLER SIX
$1395

Chandler Records Are Owners' Records

Not to our knowledge has a professional motor car driver ever made a record with a Chandler Six.

But all the thousands of owners of Chandler Sixes, every day, are making the kind of records that count. Records of satisfactory service.

The Chandler Company has never built a racing car. Chandler owners do not want racing cars.

The 55 to 60 miles per hour speed that every Chandler car will do is speed much greater than you would ever ask for.

The Chandler Company has never built a special mountain-climbing car with short wheel base and low gear ratio.

The ease with which every Chandler climbs steep grades on high gear is satisfying to the Chandler owner.

The Chandler Company has never supplied any Chandler dealer anywhere with a special gear ratio for demonstrating purposes.

What any Chandler Six does your Chandler Six will do.

The manufacturer of one six can make just as big claims as the manufacturer of any other six. But

The Chandler is a Fact-Car, Not a Claim-Car. And These Are Facts, Not Claims.

There is no other six more flexible in control, more responsive to your every demand, than the Chandler.

There is no other which will pull hard grades on high with greater ease.

There is no other so economical in operation.

There is no other which embodies in its design and construction so many features characteristic of high-grade, high-priced motor cars.

There is no other of more beautiful body lines or greater riding comfort.

Where many other well-known Sixes in the medium-priced field offer you heavy cast-iron crank cases, the Chandler offers you a cast aluminum crank-case — a feature of the Packard, Pierce-Arrow, Winton, White, Stutz, Mercer and Cadillac.

Where many other Sixes offer you noisy gear-drive for the motor shafts, Chandler offers you the silent chain drive — a feature of the Packard, Winton, Mercer and Cadillac.

The big aluminum Chandler crank-case extends from frame to frame both at the front and the rear of the motor, giving perfect rigidity to the engine-mounting and saving it from the rack and stress of the road — a feature of the Packard, Locomobile, Winton, Stutz and Mercer.

Where other Sixes offer you battery ignition, Chandler gives you Bosch High Tension Magneto, the world's finest system of ignition — a feature of the Pierce-Arrow, Locomobile, Winton, White, Stutz and Mercer.

As in the highest priced, high-grade cars, also, Chandler uses the light-running, annular ball bearings in transmission, differential and rear wheels; full floating rear axle with silent spiral bevel differential; two unit starting and lighting system — and many other features of proven excellence.

Through four years of conscientious manufacturing effort backed up by a previous experience of many years in the building of high-priced sixes, the exclusive Chandler Motor has been developed and refined to a point approximating perfection. It is a fact-motor, not a claim-motor. See it perform. Drive it. Learn how it stands up.

CHEMICAL WORKERS WEARING GAS MASKS.

WHERE THE GAS MASK ORIGINATED.

Many believe that the gas mask was an invention of the present war, but they are wrong. When the Germans introduced the use of poisonous gases in attack, the Allies at first were unable to cope with their deadliness. After a few such attacks, however, war turned to industry and there found the means of nullifying the use of poisonous gas by the use of the gas mask.

Gas masks have been used in many industries for many years. The picture shows how young women employed in handling dangerous chemicals at the Bush Terminal, New York, wear masks which protect them from deadly fumes and sparks.

SCHANTZ DAMAGE ACTION WITH JURY

County Treasurer Alleges His Ford Car Was Smashed Through John A. Lampman Driving on Wrong Side of Highway.

The action brought by County Treasurer Philip Schantz to recover $200 damages to his Ford car as a result of a collision with John A. Lampman's Studebaker car, was begun Friday morning before Judge Rudd and a jury. Mr. Schantz claims that the Lampman car struck his car at Ulster Park on April 11, 1916, while he was proceeding to his home in Highland. At the time of the collision Mr. Schantz claims to have been to the right of the road, while Mr. Lampman claims that Mr. Schantz's car swerved to the left of the road just before the accident.

The night of the accident a rain was falling and Mr. Lampman claims that after the accident Mr. Schantz stated that the rain on the windshield and the dazzling lights were the cause of the accident. At the time of the accident Harcourt J. Pratt was riding along in the Schantz car and was thrown out, sustaining cuts and bruises. The Ford car was completely wrecked, while the Lampman car had a damaged steering gear and a broken windshield. The plaintiff, Mr. Schantz, testified that at the time of the accident his car was to his right and proceeding slowly and denied that he was blinded by the rain or the lights of the approaching car. Both claim to have been to the right of the center of the road.

Jason Sahler, Ernest Eckert and Dr. Ross, who came upon the scene shortly after the accident, and helped to remove the damaged Ford, were called by the defendant and testified to the position of the cars when they arrived a few minutes after the accident.

H. J. Pratt, who was riding along with Mr. Schantz, Smede Zimmerman and Charles Zimmerman, who reside near where the accident happened, testified to the position and condition of the cars on the following morning and also to the condition of the roadway at that point. Mr. Horton was driving the Lampman car when the accident happened, and was accompanied by Mr. Lampman, who was cut about the face by flying glass and was attended by Dr. Ross and taken home after the accident.

John Eckert with Frank Brooks appears for Mr. Schantz and Judge James Jenkins with Augustus Shufeldt of counsel for the defendant. Mr. Lampman puts in a counter claim for damages amounting to over $50 for repairs to his car as a result of the accident.

The case was submitted to the jury on Friday afternoon and the jury retired with instructions to bring in a sealed verdict when court convenes on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Sandpaper in the Kitchen.

Always keep a piece of fine sandpaper in the kitchen. If your cake or bread should brown a bit too much you can rub it off more smoothly than if a grater is used. If anything sticks or burns on pans the fine sandpaper cleans more easily than anything else.

Benzol From Coal.

The amount of benzol recovered from one ton of coal amounts to two and one-half gallons. In 1915, 14,000,000 gallons of benzol were made in the United States. It is estimated that the output in 1916 has been no less than 22,000,000 gallons.

Men Left their Homes to Follow Them

Joan of Arc

A GIRL and a man are the idols of the French people.

Joan of Arc—a mere child in years, ignorant, unlettered, but possessed of a soul of holy patriotism—roused a nation to her standard of liberty in 1429 and won lasting freedom for France.

OVER in the war scarred sections of fair France today a man holds the destiny of a nation in his hand.

He is General Nivelle, pride of a nation in 1916.

The army he leads—the greatest army in his nation's history—is fighting to preserve for the people that which Joan of Arc gave to them

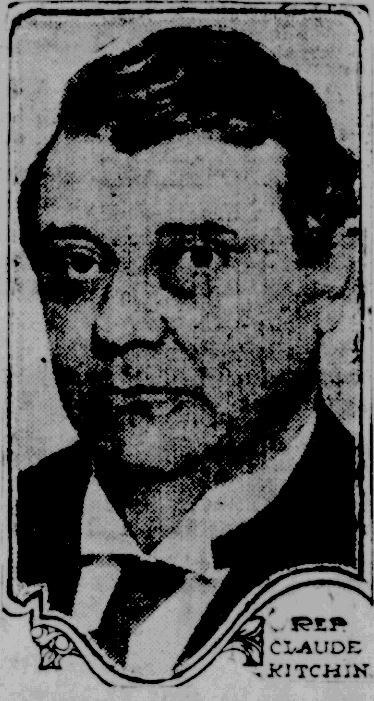
EFFORTS TO FREE YOUTHFUL THIEVES

It is understood that the parents of Mason Lurie, George Farber and Arthur Alcon, who were sent to Randall's island on Friday when found guilty of robbing the variety store of S. Baker & Son on the Strand, have retained Judge N. Frank O'Reilly and W. H. Grogan to appeal the case. The boys are only 12 years old and according to their own stories made it a practice to rob the store. As told Friday Mason Lurie was caught by Policeman Connelly tapping a cash register while his companions were on the outside of the store on guard against the approach of the policeman on that post. They were taken to Randall's Island later in the day by officer Connelly.



REP. CLAUDE KITCHIN

KITCHIN EXPECTED TO AGAIN LEAD DEMOCRATS IN "WAR CONGRESS."

Washington, March 24.—Representative Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina, is expected to succeed himself as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and floor leader of the Democrats when the Sixty-fifth Congress convenes in extra session on April 2, despite the fact that Kitchin has not always been in accord with the administration and frequently has led where he had no followers. Speaker Clark is said to have expressed his confidence that he will be re-elected to the speakership and that Kitchin will continue as majority leader.

Denied Change of Venue.

Judge Rudd has denied the motion made before him several days ago to change the place of trial of the action brought by Joseph Burman and Lewis Cherney against Philip Goldstein, from Ulster to Sullivan county. The action was brought to recover commissions on the sale of real estate, and some time ago the defendant, Goldstein, moved to change the place of trial to Sullivan county on the ground that it had been brought in Ulster county improperly. That motion was denied. The ground of his renewed motion before Judge Rudd was the convenience of witnesses. John D. Lyons of Monticello appeared for Goldstein and the motion; Traver & Murray of this city appeared for the plaintiffs and opposed.

A Napanoch Elopement.

Thursday evening Officer George Porter of Ellenville and Irving Burgher of Napanoch were in Walden in search of Judson Decker, alleged to have gone away with Burgher's wife and 17 months old baby. Decker and the woman and baby had left Napanoch on Wednesday afternoon for Kingston, and it was thought he had headed for Newburgh, where he has an uncle. Decker had worked in Napanoch for a few days. Decker last year was arrested in Walden for desertion from the United States army.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE GERMANS IN FRANCE.

This map shows the extent of the Allied advance following the German retirement in France. The lighter shading shows the progress made by the British (north of Ham, roughly) and French troops on the first day of the general retirement; the darker shading shows the advance reported on the second and third days of the withdrawal.

The "Hindenburg line," where the Germans are expected to make a stand, is also shown. This is the line which the Germans are said to have been preparing for months; but late news dispatches report fires behind this line, which would indicate that the Germans may abandon even this naturally and artificially strong defensive position.

Trollite.

Trollite, which is a very common constituent of meteorites, is generally considered to be the simple sulphide of iron, though the exact chemical composition is in doubt. This is usually in the form of nodules, plates, or rods, and, decomposing readily during flight, leaves the remaining mass with unique markings.

Peevish Pedagogue.

There are some surnames which jar on the susceptibilities of purists. A story is told of an Oxford don who, after hearing the viva voce of an undergraduate named Littler, thus addressed him: "Mr. Littler, your Greek prose is disgusting, your Latin prose is disgusting, your translation is disgusting and your name is ungrammatical."

PACIFISTS ARE NOT NEW

Both Shakespeare and Cervantes understood the pacifist spirit. Observant and given to reflection far beyond ordinary men they could not fail to recognize and dissect it for it has existed in all ages. When Prof Henry R Muzzy of Columbia University says that the loss of some hundreds of American lives is not worth going to war for and complains that we are asked to fight for honor a vague something we do not understand he plants himself beside the pacifist of the Elizabethan age whom Shakespeare satirized three hundred years ago in these words given to Falstaff

Can honour set a leg? No Or an arm No Or take away the grief of a wound No Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No What is honour? A word What is that word honour? Air A trim reckoning Who hath it? He that died o Wednesday Doth he feel it? No Doth he hear it? No Is it insensible then? Yea to the dead Therefore I ll none of it honour is a mere scutcheon and so ends my catechism

When Prof David Starr Jordan protests to the Secretary of War against General Wood s preparedness speeches urging the necessity of war against a nation with which we are at peace thus dismissing as of no importance serious injuries both physical and moral and virtually counselling meek submission thereto he merely modernizes the following argument placed by Cervantes in the mouth of Sancho Panza

Sir I am a peaceable tame quiet man and can dissemble any injury whatsoever for I have a wife and children to maintain and bring up so that gives me leave sir to tell you by way of hint since it is not my part to command that I will upon no account draw my sword either against peasant or against knight and that from this time forward in the presence of God I forgive all injuries any one has done or shall do me or that any person is now doing or may hereafter do me whether he be high or low rich or poor gentle or simple without excepting any state or condition whatsoever

What Prof Muzzy Prof Jordan and the other pacifists of their type overlook as Falstaff and Sancho Panza did before them is that honor is merely another term for human rights including the right to live in peace freedom and safety and that meek submission to aggression and wrong merely saves the individuals or the nation s skin for the moment while all the more surely forging the chains of permanent injustice and oppression. The extreme pacifist of all ages blindly desires to occupy as unenviable a position as is alleged to be that of New York City which at the present time according to Miss Agnes Repplier is as succulent as a soft shell crab and as defenseless

The Supreme Court s decision upholding the eight hour law while affirming the right of Congress to compel arbitration of labor disputes has pleased and displeased both sides to the controversy. Labor is assured of the eight hour law but must accept the principle of compulsory arbitration which it has long opposed. The railroads rejoice in the latter but complain of the vast increase in expenses involved in the measure. But both sides having won a part of what they have contended for however satisfaction to this limited extent ought to pave the way toward a peaceable adjustment of all difficulties. The court s decision means that it is within the province of Congress not only to compel the railroads to conform to a certain standard of wages and hours of employment but to compel railroad men who enter such employment to submit to compulsory arbitration or to whatever measure may be provided by law in order to keep the channels of commerce open. The impartial spectator is not likely to find anything revolutionary in this. The long established power of Congress to fix railroad rates would seem of itself to involve the right to require a certain standard of labor and wages. As for compulsory arbitration of disputes in order to prevent a tie up of commerce at a critical period or at any time such power would seem to be an essential part of sovereignty. Without such police power government would be little more than a name and to resign it would virtually involve abdication

◆

The sudden and unforeseen descent from Czar of all the Russias to plain Mr Nicholas Romanoff is a startling reminder of the mutability of human affairs. The Emperor of Germany is reported to be sad and nervous as he contemplates it and well he may be for a similar descent from imperial kaiser to plain Mr William Hohenzollern is not impossible. Improbable perhaps but yet possible in view of the increasing restlessness in Germany and the open denunciation of the aims of those in power made by prominent representatives of the numerically strong Socialist party whose organs are calling loudly for democracy. The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger which supports the present government is quoted as saying that the peril threatening Germany s future would be formidably increased if a State with a democratic constitution were to arise also on her eastern frontier. Doubtless the chief peril apprehended is the spread of the contagion of democracy from east and west into the heart of Germany itself. It has been asserted that the Germans outside of the Socialist party have no leaning toward democracies that they prefer exactly the sort of government they live under and that the habit of unquestioning obedience to those in the seats of the mighty is so ingrained as to have become second nature. But this is what until recently the whole world thought of the masses of the Russian people who indeed were not only supposed to be wholly loyal to their Czar but to regard him with superstitious veneration as an autocrat of Divine appointment. The world did not dream of Russia s rapid revolution of thought and is perhaps equally ignorant of the present intellectual undercurrents in Germany

TAKEN TOO LITERALLY

That s All That Ailed the Basketball Report Says Coach.

The basketball game played between the Rhinebeck girls and the Kingston girls on Saturday last was somewhat misrepresented in Monday s Freeman. This was not intentional and we are afraid that the report was taken too literally

The game was a hard one throughout. Both teams went into win and they showed it from the start. The first half of the game exhibited the best playing ability. The Kingston girls being favored with the better basket scored nine points while the Rhinebeck girls worked up five points with the poor basket

Naturally the Rhinebeck girls intended to change that score when they came upon the field for the second half. Likewise the Kingston girls intended to keep their score up. When teams with such intentions face each other you may be sure that something is going to happen and it did. Some of the minor rules of guarding were omitted and the playing of an open game was forgotten. Each team held the other so closely and fought so well that the third quarter ended a tie 11 11. It was Rhinebeck s good fortune to have the better basket this half

The fourth quarter was extremely exciting. No sooner had a Kingston girl secured the ball than it was captured by one of the opposing team and vice versa. This quick interception of the ball was broken now and then by a splendidly thrown field basket raising the score first on one side and then on the other. The number of points made on fouls were very few although there were many fouls called on each team. The playing of the last three minutes was intense. There was a difference of but one point in the score and one basket could turn the whole thing. The umpire s whistle blew leaving the score 15 14 in Rhinebeck s favor. This was a great disappointment to the Kingston girls for they had never before been defeated by the Rhinebeck team. The victors however must have felt very happy as before they had taken defeat so many times from the Kingstonians

Use of Mineral Oil

Dr Le Tanneur contributes to the Paris Medical some practical points in the use of mineral oil in constipation The oil he says is in no way digested or even modified by the juices of the stomach and intestines It acts as a lubricant and nothing else though it tends to heal abrasions of the intestinal wall caused by rough particles of food

The New York Medical Journal says mineral oil should be taken either before breakfast or after dinner two tablespoonfuls being a dose Its use should be continued every day for at least a fortnight when the bowels will continue to work naturally without it for the mineral oil is in no sense a cathartic but it will cure constipation —Kingston Daily Freeman February 17 1917

Taft Tells Georgians What Armed U. S. Merchantman Should do on Meeting U-Boat—In Effect at War Now.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Atlanta, Ga., March 24.—"If a commercial vessel of the United States armed in advance by the president of the United States, meets a submarine, it should sink it on the spot without warning. To wait is like waiting for a coroner's verdict when a man's pistol is pointed at you," said Former President William H. Taft, while the largest assemblage gathered in the Atlanta Auditorium in many years last night fairly raised the roof with cheers of approval.

"We are already in effect at war with Germany," Mr. Taft declared. "We have declared war against the greatest military nation in the world and we must be prepared for the greatest strain in doing our part. When we find three or more nations struggling with a common enemy of ours, it is but common sense that we should unite with those nations."

SOCIETY NOTES.

Plenzig-Quick.

Miss Estella Quick, daughter of Mrs. W. L. Quick of Marlborough, and William Plenzig of Poughkeepsie were married on March 17 at Poughkeepsie by the Rev. Hough Houston. They mere attended by Miss Anna Plenzig, a sister of the groom, and Alfred Malthouse.

The Best for Symphony Orchestra.

From its inception about four years ago, it has been the chief object of the Kingston Symphony Orchestra to give to the people, especially the young people of this city, only the very best in music. As with everything else, the initial cost of the very best is greater than that of an inferior article, yet the best lasts. This is just as true in the world of art as in the commercial world. But in order to gain a foothold, especially along untrodden paths, one must have the courage of one's convictions. Theodore Thomas, the great conductor had such courage, for when he first organized and conducted his great, world-famous orchestra, each year found a deficit facing the organization. John C. Freund, who is to lecture here next week, tells how the directors again and again said, "For heaven's sake, Thomas, give the people popular music and pay expenses." Thomas's answer was positive. "No. I will never stoop to the people. I will bring the people up to the best music." He did. Moreover he set a standard for our best orchestras which the Kingston Symphony Orchestra has thus far maintained, and which it will more than come up to in the concert to be given at the high school on Saturday evening, March 21. It looks now as though the people of our city were far in advance of those who were supposed to support Thomas, for the tickets for this concert are finding ready sale.

Dr. Cady Charms Monday Club Guests.

There was a large gathering of the members of the Monday Club and their guests at the chapel of the First Reformed Church on Friday evening, the occasion being an open meeting of the club. Mrs. Charles De La Vergne, president of the club, in a few well chosen and cordial words introduced the speaker of the evening the Rev. Dr. Putnam Cady, the new pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, who spoke on the "Romance of Ancient Art." It needed no more than the introductory remarks to prove the lecturer a fluent, delightful speaker, enthusiastically conversant with his subject, about which the average man and woman are but slightly informed, although thoroughly interested when their attention is drawn in this particular direction. Dr. Cady noted that after all it was not so much the specific pieces of ancient art remaining that rivet our deepest interest, but the human story of the artist and his times, together with his finished work. Taking hold of the single thread of the evening's discourse and following it back to ancient times, the speaker brought his audience with him into the Andelusia, the home of the Moors some 800 years ago. Describing graphically their art, he askel, "where did they get it?" The answer was "Damascus," which brought forth another query as to where the marvelous expressions of art in Damascus originated. The thread led back to Persia, and from Persia to the wilderness, where it was lost.

With many a fitting and beautiful quotation from the classics, and the descriptive touch of one familiar with what he was describing Dr. Cady pictured many a masterpiece of ancient art, which fell before the tragic destructive power not of the elements or time, but of man. No brief newspaper report of the remarkable and scholarly address, withal so living with human interest, could in any way do justice to the speaker, but all present were exceedingly enthusiastic in their expressions of appreciation and gratitude to their guests of the Monday Club for the rare treat afforded them. The evening was brought to a pleasing close with the serving of light refreshments and an informal reception for Dr. and Mrs. Cady.

JULIUS ROSENWALD.

GIVES $1,000,000 TO RELIEF OF JEWS IN EUROPE.

Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, has notified the American Jewish Relief Committee in New York that he will give $1,000,000 to feed and clothe Jewish war sufferers. This is the largest individual cash contribution ever made to a charity. The Relief Committee has announced that $10,000,000 must be raised immediately if 3,000,000 Jews in the eastern war zone are to be saved from death. Mr. Rosenwald will pay $100,000 as each million is raised.

Germany Ready Instanter.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

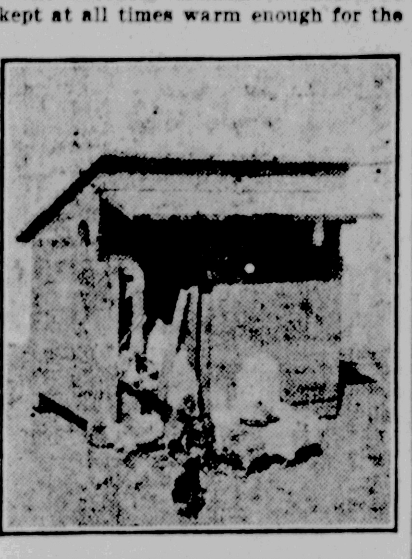
London, March 24.—Advices from Zurich today quote German newspapers as saying that Germany will declare war against the United States just as soon as an armed American merchantman ship fires upon a German submarine.

Poultry Farming

BROODING CHICKS.

Care Should Be Taken That They Be Kept Warm and Free From Drafts.

Hatching the chicks is the least of the poultryman's worries. Far more important than the hatching is the brooding, which offers all kinds of opportunities for loss if not handled properly, writes a correspondent of the Farm and Fireside. Do be very careful about drafts or sudden changes in temperature in the room where the brooders are kept. The chicks, especially during the first few weeks, are particularly susceptible to irregularities of this kind. That does not mean that there should not be plenty of fresh air in the room, but if it is the least bit cold screens should be placed by the windows so that the air does not strike the chicks directly.



BROOD COOP USED AT GOVERNMENT POULTRY FARM, BELTSVILLE, MD.

The brooders themselves should be kept at all times warm enough for the chicks to be thoroughly comfortable without crowding, which is often fatal to them. Enough brooders should be provided so that each chick will have plenty of room without being forced outside the brooder at night.

When the chicks first come out of the incubator they have in their bodies unabsorbed the yolk of the egg, which nourishes them for at least thirty-six hours, so that no food is necessary at first. The water and fine grit are essential to start the digestive organs to do their proper functions. We fed dried breadcrumbs and finely chopped hard boiled eggs as a first feed, feeding this every three hours for the first three days.

Then we gradually substituted rolled oats ground in a meat grinder and mixed this at first with breadcrumbs, as they had to be taught to relish this diet.

By the end of the first week we had begun on the grain food, which we didn't mix ourselves, but bought in the form of commercial chick feed. We fed this every three hours for the first week and then every four hours at the rate of one-half pint for a hundred chicks, which is what they can clean up in about ten minutes. In between times they had before them a hopper containing a mixture of one part of finely sifted beef scraps, one part of fine charcoal and two parts of finely sifted bran, with the addition of one part of cornmeal in the second week, also omitting to sift the bran.

During the first week we fed them also beets or turnips ground in the meat grinder, offering this about once or twice a day and gradually giving it to them oftener in the second week. We also had clabber before them when we had it, and this they relished greatly, and, of course, we kept charcoal and grit before them constantly.

Care of Young Turkeys.

Absolutely no food at all should be given young turkeys until the third day after hatching, and then the important question is less what to feed than how much. Boiled egg mixed with rolled oats, rubbed fine, and a good third of cracker crumbs is the best food. Don't let them have much, just a bite or two. Don't be overcredulous to the often told tale that a baby turk has no appetite. Some of them are as greedy as pigs, and their digestive apparatus is so delicately adjusted that a few bites too much upset them. Leave corn and corn products entirely out of their menu for best results and keep a varied assortment of grits always in reach.

Cure For Scaly Leg.

The hatching season is here. Those who hatch by hens should see that they do not have scaly legs, as they interfere with good hatches and the chicks get the infection from the old hen. Take the kerosene can and go through the henhouse after dark, take each fowl from the roost and give those that have scaly legs a good bath of kerosene right on the legs and put them back on the roost. One application is generally sufficient, and in a few weeks' time the scales will all have disappeared.

Overcrowded Brooders.

The average brooder will safely handle just about half the number of chicks for which it is claimed to be made. Crowding is almost certain to bring dire results. Be chary of the homemade brooders with lantern heat. There is danger of asphyxiation unless it is properly constructed.

Be Prepared.

Hatching the early chicks when one is not prepared to care for them will cure the chicken fever every time.

Selects a Big One.

Almost always, when one of our leading orators or prominent private conversationalists announces that he is going to state something in a nutshell, he proceeds to select one at least as big as a coconut to do it in.

Two Power Ranges

To Maximize Your Enjoyment Yet Minimize Your Expense

THE PEERLESS Eighty Horsepower Eight is a car of "dual personality." It has two distinct power ranges—each highly desirable for its particular purpose.

You can have tremendous power and abundant speed when and where you want it, without the excessive cost in operating the superpowerful car in ordinary driving. These great advantages have never before been offered in combination. They have been available only in two cars of entirely different and opposite types.

The "Loafing" Range

In ordinary driving you get the velvet smoothness, the keen flexibility and the graceful, effortless performance you would naturally expect from a Peerless.

This is the "loafing" range for your every day requirements and your motor is operating on half rations—consuming so little fuel as to put many lesser powered cars to shame—most sixes, even many fours.

The "Sporting" Range

But open the throttle a little wider to release the double poppets.

Now you have a brute of a car of utterly changed character.

With the "sporting" range in action she has the superpower and thundering speed to cope with any emergency, to contend with any of the other master cars of the day.

A ride at the wheel of a Peerless Eight will show you a wider range of performance than you have ever before found in any one car. Let us explain the double power range to you. We will gladly demonstrate.

What Reveals the Man.

The world does not always select the best man. It is drawn to the one whose appearance and conduct reflects its ideal. It forgets that often the best man is far above its conventional notions. His ideals are so far in advance they are counted erratic and visionary. He treats the popular commonplaces with supreme disinterestedness and the unthinking crowd find little in him. Subsequently history reveals the big man.

Considered Incident Bad Omen.

"Yesterday," remarked the Old Scout, "I had luncheon with my fresh young nephew. At the close of the meal he ordered a package of what I, being an old-fashioned man, call 'coffin nails,' and just as he did so a bellboy went through the dining room paging, 'Mister Spikes, Mister Spikes!' I looked upon it as an omen of bad luck."

ADVERTISEMENT WRITING.

UNWISE advertising economy is an acquired habit with many merchants, like olives and moving pictures, but when the habit is continued—curtain! They seem to believe that each time they blackjack a dollar and lay it away on ice, withdrawing it from their advertising expenditures, they have done wisely. Really, such business men are short-changing themselves. Well written advertisements are business getters. The other kind won't do at all. Let me write you advs. with "pep and punch." George M. BRAND WHITLOCK TO BE WITHDRAWN

President Wilson Stingingly Comments on Germany's Failure to Keep Pledges on Belgian Relief Work.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March 24.—Unable longer to stand the "intolerable conditons" imposed by the German government on American relief work among ten millions of destitute Belgians, the United States has withdrawn from that stricken little country Brand Whitlock, the American minister, and the American relief workers, who will take up his official residence in Havre. The withdrawal was ordered by President Wilson himself.

Accompanying the official announcement of this action today, the state department issued a statement of stinging indictment against the German government for its violation of pledges and its acts of aggression against the Belgians and their American saviours.

For sharpness of language there has been no official document issued by this government during the entire course of the war which equals it.

HIGH FALLS.

High Falls, March 24.—Mrs. Benson Elmendorf and daughter, Miss Evelyn Elmendorf, spent the past week at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Krom, of Alligerville.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Benson Elmendorf is for sale.

Miss Elizabeth Weber, who has been spending the winter in New York city, has returned home.

Mrs. Sahler visited town on Wednesday of this week.

The day the sun crossed the line was warm and spring-like. This is considered a sign of an early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Arch. Trowbridge of Lyonsville were in this place one day the past week.

THE JOINERS.

News of Interest to Members of Fraternal Societies.

Rondout Lodge, No. 343, F. and A. M., will confer the second degree Monday evening, March 26.

All members of the degree team of Washington Camp, No. 2, P. O. S. of A., are requested to meet at Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall on Henry street on Monday evening, March 26, at 6:30 o'clock for the purpose of going to Napanoch, N. Y., on that evening to institute a new camp at that place.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting was held Friday evenng by the Junior Order United American Mechanics when a class of 25 candidates took the third degree of the order. About 300 members turned out and a large delegation motored down from Woodstock Council to give the new men a royal welcome. After the initiation a fine musical program was rendered by the Mechanics' singing squad. The Woodstock brothers made noteworthy addresses and also some of the local boys gave short talks. During the evening a fine banquet was served in the faultless Mechanic style. Special mention should be made of the excellent manner in which the degree team, uniform rank, put on the work under the leadership of Captain David Boyd.

Friday night was another "big night" at Clinton Chapter, O. E. S., when the initiation of candidates was put on with the beautiful effects that go with the workings of the star degrees. Every one stored away refreshments in good shape, to the delight of the refreshment committee, and the social hour committee put on their sketch that "caught the crowd" at once. "Pa" Ford, George Van Anden, Roswell Coles and Herbert Thomas were, as those who saw them said, "just screams." A surprise popped in at the eleventh hour, it came from a former social hour committee that was supposed to be laid away on the shelf. In a quiet way and unknown to the worthy matron, they earned $20 in gold and presented it to the chapter, to the delight of the worthy matron and chapter members. At the next meeting of Clinton Chapter (April 13) they will receive the official visit of the district deputy and assistant grand lecturer of the district.

WHAT A GARDEN DID.

How One Ambitious Girl Added to Her Bank Account.

Eight years ago a twelve-year-old girl in Cleveland started a little garden for vegetables and flowers. Flowers she sold that year brought her $18.45. It was a great sum, and she could hardly wait until the next spring so she could get at that gold mine of hers again. The next year she almost doubled earnings. In the third year they soared to $59.10. Each year thereafter saw money roll in in increasing amounts. Last year she came out with $285.63. She was a capitalist and could talk with the calm superiority of the class.

"I am able to buy all my school books, clothe myself, spend some for pleasure and still add to my bank account."

A fine young woman. At twenty we can imagine her. She has no complaint in the world. Her garden is a pleasant place, friendly to self reliant young people, remunerative for labor and pains, filled with the sweet odor of flowers. Sorrow may come to her some day, but never the sense of helplessness. The garden has taught her, as school and her parents' counsel could not have, that always there is a way by which the wolf can be kept from the doorstep and by which despair is made an unknown quantity.—Toledo Blade.

Battle of Dorking.

The battle of Dorking was an imaginary battle. In 1871, at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, Englishmen were reminded by the quick work done by Germany over France of the possibilities of invasion, and Sir George T. Chesny wrote an interesting and instructive narrative called "The Battle of Dorking, or the Reminiscence of a Volunteer," in which he depicted the imaginary scene of a great battle on English soil, which was won by the Germans. In short, the battle was the product of a military man's imagination, but it was so well worked out and so vividly described that as long as the German armies were in France the mention of the battle of Dorking was enough to make an Englishman shudder.

A Nautical Explanation.

A New York woman, recounting her impressions of a trip abroad, said:

"One thing at least I learned. That was the meaning of 'windward' and 'leeward.' The captain of the liner I crossed on explained this difference to me in a way that, if a little vulgar, was yet unforgetable.

"'Captain,' I said, 'I never can tell the difference between the windward and the leeward. Explain it to me, will you?'

"'Well, madam,' said the gruff old captain, 'if I were to spit to the windward and you were to stand to the leeward of me you would be a fool.'"

COLE

Cole Leads

We were the first manufacturers of eight cylinder cars to combine large size and tremendous power with light weight and economy of operation.

The famous chassis on which all Cole models are mounted is the largest, but relatively the lightest Eight built.

Last year we introduced the Springfield Type Body with such sweeping success that it was later adopted by the builder of practically every well-known car.

The Toursedan and Tourcoupe are essentially and unmistakably Cole, even to their names--as well as in details of construction.

These were the first permanent, all-season cars---The first eight cylinder automobiles to offer equal comfort and convenience, both winter and summer, all in one and the same unit, at a single price.

In these, as in many other important and fundamental advanced features, the Cole Eight leads.

All Cole models will be shown at the automobile show. Be sure to see them.

A demonstration of any of our models will show you what the Cole Eight represents in modern motor car construction and value.

Giants Hitting Ball.

Marlin, Tex., March 24.—John McGraw is satisfied today that his heavy stickers have found their batting eyes. In yesterday's game with Waco they garnered fifteen hits. Four were home runs. The Giants won a slugfest 13 to 9.

Senators Defeat Barons.

Birmingham, Ala., March 24.—Clark Griffith isn't very proud of his Senators today. They licked the Barons 4 to 2, but got only six hits. They clash again today.

Bryan Sees Club Drill.

Miami, Fla., March 24.—The Athletics were flattered yesterday when Col. William Jennings Bryan went out to the park to give them the once over. The team lined up in their usual drill for the benefit of the Commoner.

George Doing It Well.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 24.—All indications point to an early start this season for George Foster, star hurler for the Red Sox. He is showing up well in his workouts.

The ladies will maintain their reputation for excellent service and the public is assured every possible attention. The price of the supper will be thirty-five cents, which will also include admission to an entertainment and social hour in the auditorium of the church. The entertainment will begin at eight o'clock, when the following program will be rendered: Musical selection, Gertrude Egbertson, Harold Egbertson and John Spalt. Piano solo, Leah Schutt. Reading, Viola Berryan. Piano trio, Francella Anderson, Dorothy Gill and Frank Anderson. Solo, Janet Eighmey. Reading, Marian Way. Piano duet, Minnie and Helen Planthaber.

Fire Caused Snow.

A snowstorm has been known before now to start a fire. A farmer living in a rural part of Belgium placed a quantity of quicklime near a shed on his farm, and left it there all night. In the course of the night snow fell onto the lime, and the heat thus developed became so great that it set the shed on fire, completely destroying it and its contents.

The action brought by County Treasurer Philip Schantz to recover $200 damages to his Ford car as a result of a collision with John A Lampman s Studebaker car was begun Friday morning before Judge Rudd and a jury Mr Schantz claims that the Lampman car struck his car at Ulster Park on April 11 1916 while he was proceeding to his home in Highland At the time of the collision Mr Schantz claims to have been to the right of the road while Mr Lampman claims that Mr Schantz s car swerved to the left of the road just before the accident

The night of the accident a rain was falling and Mr Lampman claims that after the accident Mr Schantz stated that the rain on the wind shield and the dazzling lights were the cause of the accident At the time of the accident Harcourt J Pratt was riding along in the Schantz car and was thrown out sustaining cuts and bruises The Ford car was completely wrecked while the Lampman car had a damaged steering gear and a broken windshield The plaintiff Mr Schantz testified that at the time of the accident his car was to his right and proceeding slowly and denied that he was blinded by the rain or the lights of the approaching car Both claim to have been to the right of the center of the road

Jason Sahler Ernest Eckert and Dr Ross who came upon the scene shortly after the accident and helped to remove the damaged Ford were called by the defendant and testified to the position of the cars when they arrived a few minutes after the accident

H J Pratt who was riding along with Mr Schantz Smede Zimmerman and Charles Zimmerman who reside near where the accident happened testified to the position and condition of the cars on the following morning and also to the condition of the road at that point Mr Horton was driving the Lampman car when the accident happened and was accompanied by Mr Lampman who was cut about the face by flying glass and was attended by Dr Ross and taken home after the accident

John Eckert with Frank Brooks appears for Mr Schantz and Judge James Jenkins with Augustus Shufeldt of counsel for the defendant Mr Lampman puts in a counter claim for damages amounting to over $ 0 for repairs to his car as a result of the accident

The case was submitted to the jury on Friday afternoon and the jury retired with instruction to bring in a sealed verdict when court convenes on Monday afternoon at 2 o clock

A GIRL and a man are the idols of the French people.

Joan of Arc—a mere child in years, ignorant, unlettered but possessed of a soul of holy patriotism—roused a nation to her standard of liberty in 1429 and won lasting freedom for France.

He is General Nivelle, pride of a nation in 1916.

EFFORTS TO FREE YOUTHFUL THIEVES

It is understood that the parents of Mason Lurie, George Farber and Arthur Alcon, who were sent to Randall's Island on Friday when found guilty of robbing the variety store of S. Baker & Son on the Strand, have retained Judge N. Frank O'Reilly and W. H. Grogan to appeal the case. The boys are only 12 years old and according to their own stories made it a practice to rob the store. As told Friday Mason Lurie was caught by Policeman Connelly tapping a cash register while his companions were on the outside of the store on guard against the approach of the policeman on that post. They were taken to Randall's Island later in the day by officer Connelly.

REP. CLAUDE KITCHIN.

KITCHIN EXPECTED TO AGAIN LEAD DEMOCRATS IN "WAR CONGRESS."

Washington, March 24.—Representative Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina, is expected to succeed himself as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and floor leader of the Democrats when the Sixty-fifth Congress convenes in extra session on April 2, despite the fact that Kitchin has not always been in accord with the administration and frequently has led where he had no followers. Speaker Clark is said to have expressed his confidence that he will be re-elected to the speakership and that Kitchin will continue as majority leader.

Denied Change of Venue.

Judge Rudd has denied the motion made before him several days ago to change the place of trial of the action brought by Joseph Burnian and Lewis Cherney against Philip Goldstein, from Ulster to Sullivan county. The action was brought to recover commissions on the sale of real estate, and some time ago the defendant, Goldstein, moved to change the place of trial to Sullivan county on the ground that it had been brought in Ulster county improperly. That motion was denied. The ground of his renewed motion before Judge Rudd was the convenience of witnesses. John D. Lyons of Monticello appeared for Goldstein and the motion; Traver & Murray of this city appeared for the plaintiffs and opposed.

A Napanoch Elopement.

Thursday evening Officer George Porter of Ellenville and Irving Burgher of Napanoch were in Walden in search of Judson Decker, alleged to have gone away with Burgher's wife and 17 months old baby. Decker and the woman and baby had left Napanoch on Wednesday afternoon for Kingston, and it was thought he had headed for Newburgh, where he has an uncle. Decker had worked in Napanoch for a few days. Decker last year was arrested in Walden for desertion from the United States army.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE GERMANS IN FRANCE.

This map shows the extent of the Allied advance following the German retirement in France. The lighter shading shows the progress made by the British (north of Ham, roughly) and French troops on the first day of the general retirement; the darker shading shows the advance reported on the second and third days of the withdrawal.

The "Hindenburg line," where the Germans are expected to make a stand, is also shown. This is the line which the Germans are said to have been preparing for months; but late news dispatches report fires behind this line, which would indicate that the Germans may abandon even this naturally and artificially strong defensive position.

Trollite.

Trollite, which is a very common constituent of meteorites, is generally considered to be the simple sulphide of iron, though the exact chemical composition is in doubt. This is usually in the form of nodules, plates, or rods, and, decomposing readily during flight, leaves the remaining mass with unique markings.

Peevish Pedagogue.

There are some surnames which jar on the susceptibilities of purists. A story is told of an Oxford don who, after hearing the viva voce of an undergraduate named Littler, thus addressed him: "Mr. Littler, your Greek prose is disgusting, your Latin prose is disgusting, your translation is disgusting and your name is ungrammatical."

The Best for Symphony Orchestra

From its inception about four years ago, it has been the chief object of the Kingston Symphony Orchestra to give to the people, especially the young people of this city only the very best in music As with everything else the initial cost of the very best is greater than that of an inferior article yet the best lasts This is just as true in the world of art as in the commercial world But in order to gain a foothold especially along untrodden paths one must have the courage of one's convictions Theodore Thomas the great conductor had such courage for when he first organized and conducted his great world famous orchestra each year found a deficit facing the organization John C Freund who is to lecture here next week tells how the directors again and again said For heaven's sake Thomas give the people popular music and pay expenses Thomas's answer was positive No I will never stoop to the people I will bring the people up to the best music He did Moreover he set a standard for our best orchestras which the Kingston Symphony Orchestra has thus far maintained and which it will more than come up to in the concert to be given at the high school on Saturday evening March 31 It looks now as though the people of our city were far in advance of those who were supposed to support Thomas for the tickets for this concert are finding ready sale

Dr Cady Charms Monday Club Guests

There was a large gathering of the members of the Monday Club and their guests at the chapel of the First Reformed Church on Friday evening the occasion being an open meeting of the club Mrs Charles De La Vergne president of the club in a few well chosen and cordial words introduced the speaker of the evening the Rev Dr Putnam Cady the new pastor of the First Presbyterian Church who spoke on the Romance of Ancient Art It needed no more than the introductory remarks to prove the lecturer a fluent delightful speaker enthusiastically conversant with his subject about which the average man and woman are but slightly informed although thoroughly interested when their attention is drawn in this particular direction Dr Cady noted that after all it was not so much the specific pieces of ancient art remaining that [illegible] our deepest interest but the human story of the artist and his times together with his finished work Taking hold of the single thread of the evening's discourse and following it back to ancient times the speaker brought his audience with him into the Andalusia the home of the Moors some 800 years ago Describing graphically their art he asked where did they get it The answer was Damascus which brought forth another journey to where the marvelous expressions of art in Damascus originated The thread led back to Persia and from Persia to the wilderness where it was lost

With many a fitting and beautiful quotation from the classics and the descriptive touch of one familiar with what he was describing Dr Cady pictured many a masterpiece of ancient art which fell before the fierce destructive power not of the elements or time but of man No single newspaper report of the remarkable and scholarly address with its living with human interest could in any way do justice to the speaker but all present were exceedingly enthusiastic in their expression of appreciation and gratitude to their guest of the Monday Club for the rare treat afforded them The evening was brought to a pleasant close with the serving of light refreshments and an informal reception for Dr and Mrs Cady

BROODING CHICKS.

Care Should Be Taken That They Be Kept Warm and Free From Drafts.

Hatching the chicks is the least of the poultryman's worries Far more important than the hatching is the brooding which offers all kinds of opportunities for loss if not handled properly writes a correspondent of the Farm and Fireside Do be very careful about drafts or sudden changes in temperature in the room where the brooders are kept The chicks especially during the first few weeks are particularly susceptible to irregularities of this kind That does not mean that there should not be plenty of fresh air in the room but if it is the least bit cold screens should be placed by the windows so that the air does not strike the chicks directly

The brooders themselves should be kept at all times warm enough for the chicks to be thoroughly comfortable without crowding which is often fatal to them Enough brooders should be provided so that each chick will have plenty of room without being forced outside the brooder at night

When the chicks first come out of the incubator they have in their bodies unabsorbed the yolk of the egg which nourishes them for at least thirty six hours so that no food is necessary at first The water and fine grit are essential to start the digestive organs to do their proper functions We fed dried breadcrumbs and finely chopped hard boiled eggs as a first feed feeding this every three hours for the first three days

Then we gradually substituted rolled oats ground in a meat grinder and mixed this at first with breadcrumbs as they had to be taught to relish this diet

By the end of the first week we had begun on the grain food which we didn't mix ourselves but bought in the form of commercial chick feed We fed this every three hours for the first week and then every four hours at the rate of one half pint for a hundred chicks which is what they can clean up in about ten minutes In between times they had before them a hopper containing a mixture of one part of finely sifted beef scraps one part of fine charcoal and two parts of finely sifted bran with the addition of one part of cornmeal in the second week also omitting to sift the bran

During the first week we fed them also beets or turnips ground in the meat grinder offering this about once or twice a day and gradually giving it to them oftener in the second week We also had clabber before them when we had it and this they relished greatly and of course we kept charcoal and grit before them constantly

Care of Young Turkeys

Absolutely no food at all should be given young turkeys until the third day after hatching and then the important question is less what to feed than how much Boiled egg mixed with rolled oats rubbed fine and a good third of cracker crumbs is the best food Don't let them have much just a bite or two Don't be overcredulous to the often told tale that a baby turk has no appetite Some of them are as greedy as pigs and their digestive apparatus is so delicately adjusted that a few bites too much upset them Leave corn and corn products entirely out of their menu for best results and keep a varied assortment of grits always in reach

Cure For Scaly Leg.

The hatching season is here Those who hatch by hens should see that they do not have scaly legs as they interfere with good hatches and the chicks get the infection from the old hen Take the kerosene can and go through the henhouse after dark take each fowl from the roost and give those that have scaly legs a good bath of kerosene right on the legs and put them back on the roost One application is generally sufficient and in a few weeks time the scales will all have disappeared

Overcrowded Brooders

The average brooder will safely handle just about half the number of chicks for which it is claimed to be made Crowding is almost certain to bring dire results Be chary of the homemade brooders with lantern heat There is danger of asphyxiation unless it is properly constructed

Be Prepared

Hatching the early chicks when one is not prepared to care for them will cure the chicken fever every time.

Selects a Big One

Almost always when one of our leading orators or prominent private conversationalists announces that he is going to state something in a nutshell he proceeds to select one at least as big as a coconut to do it in

Two Power Ranges

To Maximize Your Enjoyment; Yet Minimize Your Expense

THE PEERLESS Eighty Horsepower Eight is a car of "dual personality." It has two distinct power ranges—each highly desirable for its particular purpose.

You can have tremendous power and abundant speed when and where you want it, without the excessive cost in operating the superpowerful car in ordinary driving. These great advantages have never before been offered in combination. They have been available only in two cars of entirely different and opposite types.

The "Loafing" Range

In ordinary driving you get the velvet smoothness, the keen flexibility and the graceful, effortless performance you would naturally expect from a Peerless

This is the "loafing" range for your every day requirements and your motor is operating on half rations—consuming so little fuel as to put many lesser powered cars to shame—most sixes, even many fours.

The "Sporting" Range

But open the throttle a little wider to release the double poppets.

Now you have a brute of a car of utterly changed character.

With the "sporting" range in action she has the super-power and thundering speed to cope with any emergency, to contend with any of the other master cars of the day.

A ride at the wheel of a Peerless Eight will show you a wider range of performance than you have ever before found in any one car Let us explain the double power range to you. We will gladly demonstrate

What Reveals the Man

The world does not always select the best man It is drawn to the one whose appearance and conduct reflects its ideal It forgets that often the best man is far above its conventional notions His ideals are so far in advance they are counted erratic and visionary He treats the popular commonplaces with supreme disinterestedness and the unthinking crowd find little in him Subsequently history reveals the big man

Considered Incident Bad Omen

Yesterday remarked the Old Scout, 'I had luncheon with my fresh young nephew At the close of the meal he ordered a package of what I, being an old fashioned man call 'coffin nails' and just as he did so a bellboy went through the dining room paging 'Mister Spikes Mister Spikes' I looked upon it as an omen of bad luck.'

ADVERTISEMENT WRITING

WISE advertising economy is an acquired habit with many merchants like shows and moving pictures, but when the stat is continued—curtain! They seem to believe that each time they blackjack a dollar and lay it away on ice, withdrawing it from their advertising expenditures, they have done wisely. Really such business men are short-changing themselves. Well written advertisements are business getters. The other kind won't do at all. Let me write your ads with pep and punch. George M. Zellmer, care of Kingston Freeman.

BRAND WHITLOCK TO BE WITHDRAWN

President Wilson Stingingly Comments on Germany's Failure to Keep Pledges on Belgian Relief Work

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Washington, March 24—Unable longer to stand the intolerable conditions imposed by the German government on American relief work among ten millions of destitute Belgians the United States has withdrawn from that stricken little country Brand Whitlock, the American minister, and the American relief workers, who will take up his official residence in Havre. The withdrawal was ordered by President Wilson himself.

Accompanying the official announcement of this action today, the state department issued a statement of stinging indictment against the German government for its violation of pledges and its acts of aggression against the Belgians and their American saviours.

For sharpness of language there has been no official document issued by this government during the entire course of the war which equals it.

THE JOINERS

News of Interest to Members of Fraternal Societies

Rondout Lodge, No. [illegible], F. and A. M., will confer the second degree Monday evening, March 26.

All members of the degree team of Washington Camp, No. 2, P. O. S. of A., are requested to meet at Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall on Henry street on Monday evening, March 26, at 6:30 o'clock for the purpose of going to Napanoch, N. Y., on that evening to institute a new camp at that place.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting was held Friday evening by the Junior Order United American Mechanics when a class of 27 candidates took the third degree of the order. About 300 members turned out and a large delegation motored down from Woodstock Council to give the new men a royal welcome. After the initiation a fine musical program was rendered by the Mechanics singing squad. The Woodstock brothers made noteworthy addresses and also some of the local boys gave short talks. During the evening a fine banquet was served in the faultless Mechanic style. Special mention should be made of the excellent manner in which the degree team uniform rank put on the work under the leadership of Captain David Boyd.

Friday night was another big night at Clinton Chapter, O. E. S., when the initiation of candidates was put on with the beautiful effects that go with the workings of the star degrees. Every one stored away refreshments in good shape to the delight of the refreshment committee, and the social hour committee put on their sketch that caught the crowd at once. Pa[illegible] George Van Anden, Roswell Coles and Herbert Thomas were, as those who saw them said, just screams. A surprise popped in at the eleventh hour. It came from a former social hour committee that was supposed to be laid away on the shelf. In a quiet way and unknown to the worthy matron they earned $[illegible] in gold and presented it to the chapter to the delight of the worthy matron and chapter members. At the next meeting of Clinton Chapter (April 13) they will receive the official visit of the district deputy and assistant grand lecturer of the district.

WHAT A GARDEN DID

How One Ambitious Girl Added to Her Bank Account

Eight years ago a twelve year old girl in Cleveland started a little garden for vegetables and flowers. Flowers she sold that year brought her $13.45. It was a great sum and she could hardly wait until the next spring so she could get at that gold mine of hers again. The next year she almost doubled earnings. In the third year they soared to $50.10. Each year thereafter saw money roll in in increasing amounts. Last year she came out with $285.64. She was a capitalist and could talk with the calm superiority of the class.

"I am able to buy all my school books, clothe myself, spend some for pleasure and still add to my bank account."

A fine young woman at twenty we can imagine her. She has no complaint in the world. Her garden is a pleasant place, friendly to self reliant young people, remunerative for labor and pains, filled with the sweet odor of flowers. Sorrow may come to her some day, but never the sense of helplessness. The garden has taught her as school and her parents' counsel could not have that always there is a way by which the wolf can be kept from the doorstep and by which despair is made an unknown quantity.—Toledo Blade.

Battle of Dorking

The battle of Dorking was an imaginary battle. In 1871, at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, Englishmen were reminded by the quick work done by Germany over France of the possibilities of invasion, and Sir George T. Chesney wrote an interesting and instructive narrative called "The Battle of Dorking, or the Reminiscence of a Volunteer," in which he depicted the imaginary scene of a great battle on English soil which was won by the Germans. In short, the battle was the product of a military man's imagination, but it was so well worked out and so vividly described that as long as the German armies were in France the mention of the battle of Dorking was enough to make an Englishman shudder.

A Nautical Explanation

A New York woman recounting her impressions of a trip abroad said:

"One thing at least I learned. That was the meaning of 'windward' and 'leeward.' The captain of the liner I crossed on explained the difference to me in a way that, if a little vulgar, was yet unforgetable.

"'Captain,' I said, 'I never can tell the difference between the windward and the leeward. Explain it to me, will you?'

"'Well, madam,' said the gruff old captain, 'if I were to spit to the windward and you were to stand to the leeward of me you would be a fool.'"
